DRIVER KILLED AS POWER FAILS

An area-wide power failure which started at 10:03 a.m. today was blamed in the death of a 24-year-old Parsons, B.C. woman who died instantly when the car she was driving collided with a tractor trailer at Beacon and Pat Bay Highway.

Sidney RCMP said traffic lights in the busy intersection had only stopped working about two minutes when Corry Termors attempted to cross the highway and entered the path of a ferry-bound automobile carrier driven by Charles Brian Ridgeview, 29, of Langley.

A police spokesman said Miss Termors had just arrived in Sidney Friday for a visit with her father, Engelbertus Termors, of 10105 Pleasant.

The Sidney area was still without power more than an hour after lights went off in the capital region and a B.C. Hydro employee said it was necessary to build up normal load slowly following total failure of the system.

A Hydro spokesman said trouble appeared to be in switching equipment governing submarine transmission cable from the mainland, although the cable itself was intact. All of Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands were affected for period ranging from about 10 minutes to nearly two hours.

34 SEAMEN are feared dead in a collision and resulting fire today in Tokyo Bay which involved a 43,723-ton tanker (in background) the No. 10 Yuyo Maru and the 10,874-ton Liberian freighter Pacific Ares. The tanker was carrying liquid petroleum gas and immediately burst into flames.

ICBC Agents To Picket Tuesday

Victoria insurance agents will set up a picket line in front of the provincial motor-vehicle branch office on Menzies Street Tuesday morning in their continuing strike against Autoplan.

Meanwhile, Transport Minister Robert Strachan has promised no interruption of service by Insurance Corp. of B.C.

He noted insurance agents are independent businessmen and "if they want to abandon their business, that's up to them."

ICBC general manager Norman Bortnick said he is confident "a substantial number of companies" will remain involved with Autoplan under new terms of commission offered by the corporation. The commission rates would stand, he said.

Victoria strike co-ordinator Bob Parkinson said the boycott by the province's 1,100 insurance agents will continue until the government agrees to bargain on their demands.

He said the agents are seeking:

A 15 per cent increase in commission rates to 10.35 per cent, up from the present level of 9 per cent.

A longterm contract with the government to continue to act as Autoplan agents.

A commission fee for collecting the 5 per cent sales tax.

Parkinson said the government has offered only a decrease in the commission rate to 7 per cent plus a flat $2 fee, representing a reduction of 11 per cent.

He said the government also refuses to discuss a plea for a long-term contract and a fee for handling the 5 per cent sales tax.

Parkinson said the government's reason for suggesting a reduction in the commission rate for 1975 is that the forms will be easier to process next year.

"In fact, the reverse is true," he said.

Parkinson said because of computer foul-ups at ICBC headquarters that 250,000 motorists will not get their printouts for their insurance applications at year's end.

"This means for 250,000 cases, we insurance agents will have to locate their 1974 form and work out the new rate. This means more work for us, not less."

The Insurance Agents of British Columbia have offered to send all outstanding issues to binding arbitration but the government has not agreed to this, Parkinson said.

The strike by agents began at noon Friday with a picket line around the Vancouver headquarters of the Insurance Corporation of B.C. during the lunch hour.

No actions are planned over the long weekend but picketing will resume on Tuesday, Parkinson said.

Insurance agents' president Jack Hamilton claimed full support of all agents, involving about 80 per cent of Autoplan business. He said the motor-vehicle branch would not be able to handle 50,000 new, altered and renewal li-

Hotelmen Crying In Their Beer

The nickel hike in the cost of a glass of beer isn't enough and should be doubled, George Laak, head of the Victoria division of the B.C. Hotel Association, said today.

The association will meet Thursday to discuss the price announced Friday by William Bruce, general manager of the Liquor Administration Branch.

"We aren't happy," he said. "We were hoping for at least a 10-cent rise."

Operating costs have gone up between 30 and 40 per cent and the 30-cent glass of beer won't begin to cover them all, he claimed.

"Taxes have doubled in the past year, labor has increased an average of $1,000 an employee a year, tradesmen's wages have gone up and so have costs for freight and goods.

"We have a lot of caching up to do."

Laak said a 10-cent hike which would have brought a glass of beer to 35 cents would have put operators in a better position to meet their costs and keep up their places.

"The only thing that really scares me is if operators can't make a decent profit they will slacken off in keeping up their establishments. The housekeeping isn't going to be done that should be."

Pair Held For Bomb Threats

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — A quiet couple who grew Christmas trees was arrested Friday in a $1 million extortion bomb plot against the Bonneville Power Administration.

The suspects, David Heesch, 34, and his wife, Sheila, will be arraigned Monday on charges involving the recent bombings of 11 BPA transmission towers serving Portland.

Julius Mattson, special agent in charge of the FBI's office here, indicated no other arrests were expected in the case.

Agents apprehended the Heesch couple in southeast Portland while they were in a car with one of their two young children.

The warrants charge Heesch with writing the BPA and the FBI demanding $1 million in exchange for a promise to cease bombings.

He was accused of threatening a blackout of Portland. His wife, also 34, was charged with aiding in the extortion attempt.

Rescue Ends Farm Terror

ODESSA, Sask. (CP) — A dramatic, but bloodless predawn rescue today ended almost 12 hours of terror for a farm family held hostage by a man who had escaped police custody in Edmonton.

Edward Millard, 26, was agrested by RCMP after his brother Roger, who had been flown from Edmonton to talk to him, seized the rifle which the man had used to stand off scores of policemen throughout the night.

The drama began about 7 p.m. Friday, when Millard, fleeing from police after an alleged kidnapping attempt in Weyburn, Sask., turned in at the small, two-storey farmhouse of farmer Felix Klein, near this community about 40 miles southeast of Regina.

Mrs. Klein and six children ranging in age from one to 19 years, were trapped in the house with the fugitive.

Millard had escaped custody in Edmonton Thursday, while facing charges of attempted murder and rape.

RCMP were on his trail after a woman complained of an attempted kidnapping in Weyburn, about 40 miles from the Klein farm.

A witness noted the licence number of the car involved in the incident.

RCMP said during the 12 hours Millard held the farmhouse, the Klein family stayed in the attic, refusing his demands that they come down.

The police borrowed large trucks from neighboring farms to serve as shields in case they decided to storm the house.

But their main hope was Millard's family, his mother, father and two brothers, who were flown in to talk to him.

While RCMP with bullet-proof vests and rifles moved into position, Millard's family began what was to be 1½ hours of tense negotiation with him, using loudspeakers.

Finally, he agreed to let his brother Roger into the house. After he refused to give up his rifle, Roger seized it and grappled with him until RCMP rushed in and helped overpower him.

Millard was taken to hospital for examination.

SUPERMARKET CREDIT PROBE

The latest merchandising gimmick, credit cards for supermarkets, has created the newest controversy in Canada and federal Consumer Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet has ordered a proble of the practice.

A similar probe is under way by the Ontario government. Both governments are concerned that credit cards will result in higher food prices because of the added cost of servicing.

Master Charge and Chargex are conducting experiments in various Canadian centres, including Victoria. A survey of B.C. experiments is on page 11.

Courier Gets Jail Not Fine

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Court of Appeal Friday cancelled a $15,000 fine a drug courier was assessed in provincial court and replaced it with a five-year prison sentence.

Kenneth Tighe was fined but did not receive a jail term when he pleaded guilty in provincial court to possession of about $65,000 in cocaine for the purpose of trafficking.

At that time, provincial court Judge Nicholas Mussallem said he was taking into the fact that Tighe was 24 years old, came from a good family, had a Bachelor of Arts degree, had a good work record and that in this case he was serving as a courier.

He gave Tighe three years to pay the fine, $3,000 of which Tighe had already paid when the Crown appealed on grounds that the sentence was inadequate.

The court was told that in a bag in Tighe's possession police found 21.3 ounces of cocaine and in his room a further four pounds of the drug.

Mr. Justice A. E. Branca, in handing down the appeal court judgment, said: "This imposing of a fine in this case was totally and completely inadequate punishment.

"While it may create hardships upon this respondent, as it should it fails as a sufficient deterrent and does not adequately protect the public," he added.

"This respondent, notwithstanding his good record in the past, is entitled to very little consideration. He has no mercy on those who are addicted and those who become slaves to the use of the drugs in which he trafficks."

Mr. Justice Branca said Tighe, acting as a courier, was carrying out an important job "for those higher up who hide behind and employ stupid, unthinking and irresponsible people such as Tighe as part of a scheme for the distribution of these narcotics to the public.

"In the control of this traffic and in the protection of the public, even the stupid, the unthinking and the irresponsible will have to be sternly dealt with," he said.

'Starve Out Solutions'

ROME (UPI) — More than 1,000 delegates to the world food conference listened in disbelief as Philippines' foreign minister Carlos Romulo suggested they be locked up until they figure out how to stop famine.

"Let us agree to be confined in this hall until we can alleviate famine in the world," Romulo said Friday.

"Let us be given to eat every day of our confinement only what Asian and African peasants eat. Otherwise, let us just eat our own words. I am sure this will speed up the proceedings of this conference," he added.

Montreal Remains Paralysed

MONTREAL (CP) — One of Canada's main rail terminals remained paralysed today as thousands of striking railway workers stayed off the job to show their dissatisfaction with a new collective agreement.

About 15,000 Canadian National Railways and Canadian Pacific Railway employees walked out, halting all railway passenger and freight services out of Montreal and forcing thousands of commuter to find other modes of transportation.

"All our operations will remain closed until further notice," a CNR spokesman said.

The CNR was hit by a walkout by 5,000 of its employees earlier in the week. About 2,200 CPR shop craft workers picketed downtown Windsor Station Friday, forcing cancellation of all outbound trains.

The railway halted operations later in the day and a spokesman said 9,000 employees were sent home.

The strikers are protesting a $350 cost-of-living bonus awarded all 100,000 rail workers across Canada.

The strikers say the bonus compares poorly with a $750 settlement recently awarded to Montreal firemen.

IDEA OF UNTRAINED MAN

Anti-Gravity Device Discovered in U.K.

LONDON (CP) — The fertile brain of British scientist Eric Laithwaite has produced a new device that he thinks could allow space ships to vastly increase the range of their travels.

It is an anti-gravity device that produces a lift and weight-reduction by means of swiftly-revolving gyroscopes attached to two hinged metal arms.

Laithwaite is famous in Britain for his work in the field of linear induction motors as applied to such transportation means as hovercraft.

But his most spectacular recent work, in conjunction with Prof. Fred Eastham of Aberdeen University, has been on the new propulsion system known as electromagnetic rivers.

There has been political discussion recently in Ontario about whether the Krauss-Maffei magnetic levitation system for mass rapid transit, now being developed, should be scrapped in favor of the Laithwaite-Eastham method, which would move trains at high speed along electromagnetic force fields indficed over an aluminum-topped concrete track.

Laithwaite, who teaches electromagnetic engineering at the Imperial College of Science and Technology in London, got the anti-gravity idea from the contents of a dream related to him by a public relations man with no scientific training.

The man told Prof. Laithwaite he had dreamed several times of a meeting of a learned society at which a scientist placed a small box on a kitchen measuring-scale.

The scale registered 15 pounds but when the scientist pressed a switch, it read ten pounds, despite an absence of either applied air thrust or mechanical thrust.

The scientist then opened the box to show two electrically-driven gyroscopes, one on each end of a rotating arm.

The public relations man took out a patent on his dream and went to see Laithwaite.

The professor altered the design he was shown, bringing in some ideas that had been put to him by an amateur inventor, and produced the machine he has now built which seems to do exactly what he says it does.

Laithwaite is a strong believer in intuition and dreams and said some months ago that many of his best ideas come to him when he is dozing early in the morning or late at night.

This is his explanation of how it works:

"When two hinged metal arms, each bearing a fast-revolving gyroscope, are rotated at high speed, they automatically rise in the air without any thrust being placed on them. A curved rail then drives them down again and the reaction to this gives lift to the whole machine as the cycle is rapidly repeated."

Its challenge to parts of Newton's laws of motion and its practical possibilities excite him greatly.

He says that reducing weight in spaceships by a system of gyroscopes would obviate the need for the jets used to manoeuvre and drive them when they have achieved orbit.

"Since jets are useless when they run out of fuel, space travel has so far been limited to the planets. With gyros operated by solar power or nuclear energy it will be possible to explore other solar systems."

He also sees possible such applications as silent propulsion for ships and adds: "But it is the consequences for the whole of mechanical and atomic theory that may be really shattering."

4 Walked Off Job, CanCel Closes Down

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — A British Columbia Labor Relations Board official will meet union and management representatives during the weekend to try to settle a dispute which has halted production at the Canadian Cellulose operation.

The pulp mill, which employs about 1,200 people, is without power or steam following the walkout Friday of four men on the powerhouse crew.

The men are protesting the firing of an employee for negligence after a major fire last Saturday.

A spokesman for Local 4 of the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada said about 40 men were off the job by Friday evening, with most of the other employees doing maintenance work.

CanCel is 70-per-cent owned by the B.C. government.

CHEERFULLY trudging along early part of 20-mile walkathon route through Victoria today, these walkers were caught on Dallas Road near Beacon Hill before rain started. Event originating at Scout House was to gather pledges for United Way. Stimulus was added by competition between high schools for the greatest value of pledges secured during collections from sponsors next week.

Agents to Picket Tuesday

cence applications each month.

"There will be tremendous lineups," Hamilton predicted.

He also said that by accepting the proposed rates offered by ICBC, agents would lose $2 million, an amount the membership could not afford.

The agents say they are ready to meet ICBC at any time to resolve the difference, and apologize to their clients for any inconvenience. ICBC directors refuse to meet the agents, according to the association.

Main target for pickets will be offices of the motor vehicle branch, the largest agency still selling car insurance, he said.

(The British Columbia Automobile Association said Friday it will handle 1975 policies but indicated it will not sell Autoplane insurance after the end of December.)

The pickets will carry signs asking the government to begin negotiations. Information booths will also be set up at various sites in Victoria, not yet determined, he said.

Parkinson said the agents were told in January the government would begin discussions in June of this year.

However, at a meeting June 25 with Strachan, the minister in charge of Autoplan, the agents were simply asked for suggestions on how Autoplan procedures could be made more efficient.

There has been no negotiation on fees and no answer to any of the agents' suggestions made at the June 25 meeting, Parkinson said.

He said Strachan has refused to meet with representatives of the Insurance Agents of B.C. to discuss unresolved differences.

He added the government refused to submit negotiations to binding arbitration on grounds that agents were not a recognized union.

Woman Injured

A 25-year-old Comox woman is in poor condition in the intensive care unit of Victoria General Hospital today following a two-car collision on Four Mile Hill on the Island Highway at 2:45 p.m. Friday.

Colwood RCMP said Patricia Pridy received multiple injuries in the mishap which also sent her husband, Milton, to hospital.

He was treated and released. The couple's 18-month-old baby, Robin, was not injured.

Police said the driver of the other car was George Percival, 35, of 779 Revilo Place, Victoria.

Percival received minor injuries but two passengers in his car were uninjured.

Sirica Upheld in Court

WASHINGTON (WP) — In a ringing defence of U.S. district judge John Sirica's conduct of the original Watergate trial, the U.S. court of appeals unanimously upheld the conviction of Watergate conspirator G. Gordon Liddy Friday.

The opinion rejected widespread criticism of Sirica, who made clear before the January, 1973 trial, that he was interested not only in obtaining a verdict on the guilt or innocence of the defendants, but in getting to the bottom of the Watergate scandal.

"Judge Sirica's palpable search for the truth in such a trial was not only permissible, it was in the highest tradition of his office as a federal judge." Judge Harold Leventhal wrote for the seven-member panel that ruled on Liddy's appeal.

The Court of Appeals ruling is certain to be read closely by defence lawyers in the Watergate cover-up trial now being conducted before Sirica.

At least one of those lawyers, John H. Wilson, has made it clear that he is hoping to goad Sirica into committing errors that will cause the appellate court to reverse a conviction if Wilson's client, former White House chief of staff H. R. (Bob) Haldeman, is found guilty.

The appellate court ruling did not say that Sirica's handling of the original trial had been error-free, but that the errors for the most part were harmless and therefore not prejudicial.

Wins Bail

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Former U.S. Army Lieutenant William Calley, the only person convicted in connection with the My Lai massacre in Vietnam, was granted both parole and freedom on bail Friday.

In unexpected back-to-back developments, a federal appeals court in New Orleans ordered Calley freed on bail and Army Secretary Howard Callaway announced he was paroling Calley effective Nov. 19.

U.S. District Court Judge Robert Elliott of Columbus, the judge who overturned Calley's court-martial conviction Sept. 25, scheduled bail proceedings for today.

Car Slams Into House

Residents in the 2700-block Shelbourne were jarred out of their slumber shortly after 4 a.m. today when a car went out of control, slammed into the corner of a house at 2721 Shelbourne, demolished the veranda of a house next door, and came to rest against a car parked in a driveway at 2717.

The driver of the car, John Wayne Lukey, 29, of no fixed address, pleaded guilty in provincial court today to driving while having more than 80 milligrams alcohol per 100 millilitres of blood.

Judge Harold Alder set a $300 fine, prohibited him from driving for one year and placed him on six months probation.

"You were fortunate no one was killed," Alder said.

Rekindle Former Dreams, Expert on Aging Advises

Daydreaming and fantasy can provide important clues to mid-career and retirement changes, a near-capacity crowd at Newcombe auditorium was told Friday night by an expert on aging.

Dr. Herbert Otto, chairman of the National Centre for the Exploration of Human Potential in San Diego, Calif., spoke under the aegis of Greater Victoria Counselling Centre and the Council of Churches on a grant from the human resources department.

Dealing with the subject of changing direction during one's working life, Otto said taking time is important, that hastening into some new endeavor is undesirable.

A person should rekindle childhood dreams, try to determine what he needs and what he wants from life, and to re-establish contact with his "true self."

"Some people . . . never ask themselves, 'what are my life goals?'" Otto said.

It was important to sort out priorities, to talk about one's feelings, determine past successes and achievements and realize creativity potential.

He said this point in a person's life should be seen as an opportunity rather than a crisis.

Similarly, a person on the verge of retirement needs to sort out his strengths and resources, where his interests lie and then deal with his anxieties and concerns such as how much money he can expect to live on, where he will live and what his hobbies will be.

Curiosity and creativity are important and should be nourished, Otto said. Personal relationships and physical environment and attitude toward life in general are relevant.

"The worst thing to do is to retire into a small cubbyhole. Physical and social isolation is the greatest enemy," he said.

Potential for artistic creativity and a wide range of other talents should be realized and exploited rather than taken to the grave, and wasted.

Attitudes toward sex, death and dying need re-examination: "If you can face death and accept it on an emotional level, you will find that energy will be freed for fuller living," Otto declared.

"I have seen people come out of their shells with the simple use of touch massage. We have pulled back people who were complete vegetables on their way to death," he said.

44 FATALITIES IN 42 CRASHES

Figures issued by a Canadian Forces search official show 42 planes were involved in crashes in British Columbia during the first nine months of this year.

Forty-four people were killed in those mishaps and another 18 were saved.

Captain Bill Aikman of CFB Esquimalt said Friday there is only one plane still listed as missing in the province — the aircraft flown by Bill Hines of Kamloops, with two other people aboard, missing since last February in the rugged country northwest of Kamloops.

Captain Aikman credited the electronic crash locator with the finding of a dozen planes so far this year. He said when the indicator becomes mandatory in all aircraft next year, it will be a major factor in reducing search time and in saving lives.

Autoplan Agents Apologize

Our job as Independent Insurance Agents is to serve the people of British Columbia, and the last thing we want to do is to inconvenience them. We, therefore, deeply regret that the Government has backed us into an impossible position. We cannot continue to handle Autoplan on their terms and stay in business. It is as simple as that.

Here are the facts:

- ICBC broke its agreement with licensed agents by failing to pay their full commissions within the specified 15 days following receipt of Autoplan documents. Many thousands of dollars owing to the agents remain unpaid. The company has also refused to continue payment for heavy responsibilities added to the agents' workload since the agreement was reached.
- Autoplan agents insist on negotiating with those who, under the Insurance Act Regulations, set their commission rates — the ICBC Board of Directors. The Board has refused to meet with the agents' negotiating committee.
- Agents have been offered an 11% reduction in Autoplan income for the 1975 licensing year compared with 1974. ICBC has even refused their request for a reasonable cost-of-living allowance such as already granted to its own company staff.
- The agents insist on a long-term agreement to permit them to improve their facilities and service to the public. The Government's refusal to meet this demand suggests that its future plans do not include the independent insurance agents.
- Agents have been called upon to issue licence plates and collect Provincial sales tax without any payment whatsoever.

We are pleased to meet with ICBC at any time to resolve our differences and avoid any further inconvenience to the public.

Bird in centre not just another gull

STRAY FEATHERS
harold hosford

At first glance the bird looked like any other Bonaparte's Gull in winter plumage — white head with a dark smudge just behind the eye, pale grey back, grey wings with silvery tips, red bill, and red legs and feet.

Red bill? Hold on a minute! Bonaparte's Gulls don't have red bills — or do they?

Check the book. No, Bonaparte's never have red bills. So what kind of a gull is it — a hybrid or some other kind of genetic freak?

Check the book again. Ah ha! Could it be a Black-headed gull? Not likely — Eurasian bird — thousand miles from home — never been seen here before anyway.

Let's check the bird again. Yes, all the Bonaparte's field marks are there. Except for the red bill it would be a Bonaparte's. But look at those legs; they're half again as long as a Bonaparte's. And look at the size of the bird' compared with that Bonaparte's standing nearby, it's almost twice as big — almost as big as a Mew Gull.

Maybe it is a Black-headed gull? They're Eurasian birds right enough, but they've been seen regularly for years along North America's North Atlantic coast. And what about those Pribiloff records? For the last 3 or 4 years Siberian Black-headed gulls have been turning up on St. Paul Island in the Behring Sea; and let's not forget that recent California record.

Yes, maybe it is a Black-headed gull.

I can't vouch for Chauncey Wood's thoughts when he discovered the bird at Clover Point nearly two weeks ago but these were my thoughts when I first saw the bird two days later. And any early doubts I might have had about the bird were quickly swept away as the identification was confirmed by higher authorities.

The bird was a Black-headed gull right enough, but more important it was the first of its kind ever seen in British Columbia.

Black-headed gulls, despite their name, are actually brown-headed gulls — when in their summer plumage — and this feature is usually enough at that time of year to separate them from any other North American gull, such as Bonaparte's, with a truly black head.

But in winter, when most of the gulls with black heads have moulted into their white-headed plumage, Black-headed gulls can easily be overlooked among the thousands of other gulls found around our shores.

Ralph Fryer, one of Victoria's resident gull experts, doesn't think they've been overlooked. Ralph has spent much of his leisure time in the last 10 years looking over the gulls at Clover Point for just such a bird — a Bonaparte's Gull with a red beak — and until last month he'd been enjoying almost complete frustration.

Mind you, about three years ago he did get one bonus for his persistence — a tiny, almost white gull that turned out to be our first Ross' Gull.

But getting back to the Black-heads, they're one of Europe's commonest gulls, enjoying the fruits that come of close association with man's garbage, namely a population bomb. Like North American Herring Gulls, who also enjoy a common interest in garbage, their kind have increased dramatically in the last 30 or 40 years. This might account for the steady rise in the numbers of Black-headed gulls turning up on the west coast of the Atlantic.

Whether a similar increase in the eastern races of Black-headed gulls, which nest from the northern Japanese islands to Siberia, has taken place is still a moot point but there is little doubt that Victoria's latest contribution to British Columbia's bird list hailed from somewhere along the northwest coast of the Pacific Ocean.

DISCIPLINE STUDY GROUP FAVORS STRAP

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

A father finds his 11-year-old son is becoming hard to handle at home and at school, and he's beginning to wonder if corporal punishment is necessary.

A junior high school shops teacher has discovered boys are stealing tools.

A principal has called a child and his parents into his office and seen the child "attack them unmercifully and insult them and degrade them".

Those concerns and others drew 135 people to a meeting on classroom discipline this week in the library of George Jay elementary school.

The meeting, called by Greater Victoria school board, was a chance for parents, students and teachers to voice their opinions on the problem of classroom discipline and suggest solutions.

Participants divided into 10 discussion groups, then reunited at the end of the meeting to report on what they discussed.

The Times sat in on one discussion group, composed of a principal, a shops teacher, a teenager, several parents, and Dr. Philip Ney, school trustee and child psychiatrist, who co-ordinated the discussion.

"I can see a breakdown of responsibility and authority at all levels," said the principal.

"It's getting worse and it's getting worse rapidly. And I don't mean years, I mean months," he said.

"I don't know how to stop it and frankly, I'm afraid."

Parents come to him and say they can no longer control their children, said the principal.

Most schools in the district have given up trying to deal with truancy cases, he said.

"We've got a softness in our approach," he said, that is causing this loosening of control.

The teenager said he finds young children have become "sarcastic and vulgar" and said he thought corporal punishment for them is no worse than a whack on the nose of a disobedient puppy.

Three mothers in the group strongly disagreed, saying the resort to corporal punishment represents the failure of the parent or teacher to handle the situation in a better way.

Ney supported their argument, saying: "Pain makes angry children."

"I've seen a lot of battered children, children who have almost been killed by their parents," he said. It is a fact, he said, that most of these parents suffered corporal punishment as a child.

Ney said most adults tend to support and use the kind of discipline they received when they were children.

There are many effective ways to discipline children, he said, but most adults don't know about them because they have no training in being parents.

When the discussion groups made their reports, a majority of participants seemed to favor reinstituting the use of the strap, which was abolished by Education Minister Eileen Dailly more than a year ago.

COUNCILLOR SAM OVER THE HILL

TROUTDALE, Ore. (AP) — For years, city councilman Sam Cox had a good time ribbing folks about their age.

"You were a good man once, Charlie, but you just turned 50 and you're over the hill. Why don't you retire and enjoy your last few years?"

Or, "You were a pretty snappy cheerleader once, Mabel, but you're 50 now and your future's behind you."

Sam Cox turned 50 today. And Troutdale's 1,300 citizens weren't about to let it pass unnoticed.

The posters began to appear last Monday, in every store window, on every lamp post, every telephone pole, on taverns, houses, voting booths.

"Sam Cox wishes to announce that on Nov. 9 he will be 50 years old and over the hill."

And tonight, they planned a big chicken and dumplings dinner for the whole town in his honor.

Rights Agency Planned

A national agency will be set up to co-ordinate the development of human rights in Canada.

That was the major statement emanating from a two-day conference of human rights ministers from across Canada that closed here Friday.

Labor Minister William King, host of the conference, said in a news conference efforts would be made to establish a permanent secretariat within the existing Canadian Association of Statutory Human Rights Agencies, better known by its acronym CASHRA.

He said details about location of the secretariat, budget, or how many people it would employ, have not yet been worked out.

However, delegates agreed funding should be by federal-provincial cost sharing program.

King said the secretariat would encourage interprovincial exchange of information on human rights as well as share research needs and co-ordinate response to common problems.

"It will be useful in terms of developing a continuing vehicle for bringing together those agencies responsible for human rights across the nation," he said.

More than 50 senior government officials attended the conference. All provinces were represented.

Another meeting will be convened in the near future in Nova Scotia to consider the problem of duplication by the federal government of provincial enforcement of human rights.

King suggested nothing definitive could be done in human rights until the provinces deal directly with federal authorities. That is impossible at present as no member of the cabinet has been designated to a human rights portfolio.

CAB FIRM APPLIES

Permission to pick up fares anywhere on Saanich Peninsula is sought by Blue Bird Cabs Ltd. following a decision of the motor carrier commission broadening C and C Taxi Service Ltd. operations.

Blue Bird president Bruce Woodward said approval of the application would extend the conditions of licence for each of the company's 43 taxis, enabling drivers to not only deliver fares anywhere on the peninsula, but to pick them up as well.

Not Much for Consumers

A browse through the dusty statute books containing laws enacted by the British Columbia legislature sometimes provides an eye-opening education about the powers of our provincial government, regardless of political stripes. There are neglected powers, disused powers and powers which might make civil libertarians throw up their hands in dismay.

Such a law giving the government rather wide authority was debated in the legislature for most of this week. Called the Natural Products Marketing Act, it is essentially a revised version of a law which has been around for most of three decades. It governs activities of producer-operated marketing boards.

Opposition parties battened onto the idea that the new act, which will allow the cabinet to establish a super-board of appeal from decisions of individual marketing boards, only sets up a new level of bureaucracy and doesn't do much about the well-advertised current problems of agricultural marketing, namely eggs and fowl. And they said it doesn't do much for the beleaguered consumer either. Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich said only he would think about giving consumers representation on the super-board.

There wasn't much mention, except in vague general denunciations of sweeping powers, of the specific authority in the legislation. There it is in black and white — the cabinet may promote, control and regulate any or all aspects of transport, packing, storage or marketing of natural products, including the prohibition of same.

Natural product is defined as any product of agriculture, the forest, sea, lake or river or any article of food or drink wholly or partly manufactured from any such natural product. That's a definition wide enough to drive a truck through. Undoubtedly it could include all kinds of forest products, lumber, even the paper upon which this is printed. But it's no new socialist wrinkle — this was all lifted word for word from the old legislation.

The power conferred on government in such legislation may seldom or never be used, but it's still there, an example of the broad catch-all laws B.C. legislators — whether flaming radicals or die-hard conservatives — just love to draft when they get into power, instead of specific laws carefully-drawn to deal with certain problems.

Debate on the marketing board legislation brought out some strange arguments from all sides of the house. Social Credit MLAs called it tired old legislation and said there must be some better way than marketing boards — but stopped short of advocating their abolition and they offered no new ideas. Perhaps their arguments had something to do with the fact that most Social Credit members come from rural ridings where marketing boards are an entrenched part of agriculture.

Liberals argued forthrightly for an end to all marketing boards; "good honest, healthy competition" is the only way to go, said one. Try that one next time you need the services of a lawyer or physician and don't like the fee schedule.

And the agriculture minister claimed the bill was just trying to put farmers on an equal footing with other groups in society who have powerful collective bargaining rights. But as Allan Williams (L—West Vancouver-Howe Sound) pointed out, consumers haven't much clout in any struggle with marketing boards: "It's pay up or stop eating."

Come Fly With Me for Free

Federal Health Minister Marc Lalonde flies off to Israel on official business in a liquor corporation's private jet; Margaret Trudeau journeys to Japan as the guest of a Tokyo shipping firm on an all expense paid junket. In Ruritania the government does these kinds of things. In Canada the government is expected to be aloof from such potential conflicts of interest.

On merely a superficial level such arrangements imply cosy relationships between the Liberal administration and big business. Closer to the bone, both trips have subtle nuances distasteful to the majority of Canadians. In a country with a severe alcoholism problem which costs the government millions each year the last place the minister of health should hitch a ride is in a distillery jet. Nor should the wife of the prime minister of Canada christen a 273,000 ton oil tanker in Japan. It is not inconceivable that the same tanker might at some future date spill its crude load into the strait of Juan de Fuca. The irony would be lost in the resulting tragedy.

Incredible as it may seem, the government has treated opposition comments on the ambiguities involved in a flippant manner. Responding to criticism, the prime minister said perhaps he could arrange to have the health minister fly to Egypt on a brewery jet in the next trip. Why not? And Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan could do a cross-country check-up on beef prices as the guest of a consortium of packing houses. Defence Minister James Richardson could do a NATO tour sponsored by an arms manufacturer. Given its comfortable majority, the government is beginning to look like the bad guys in Mission Impossible.

NORMAN GIDNEY

Think a Little Faster, Bill

One of those indispensable skills a politician needs is the ability to think fast on his feet. He should be ready to throw out his carefully laid plans when circumstances change on the spot, when he gets thrown an unexpected question—or answer.

Goodness knows, Social Credit leader Bill Bennett has "matured rapidly" in the job, as the party's newest MLA said, learning to put together a consistent, logical argument. He gave a fair speech on Monday in opposing the government's new marketing board legislation, speaking extemporaneously. There's no comparison with his father's odd style of public speaking—staccato bursts, cut-off sentences, ideas appearing to out-run his tongue.

But in the cut-and-thrust of question period, where timing and wit count about as much as substance, Bennett junior gets failing grades. Witness his exchange with Industrial Development Minister Gary Lauk (the Harpo Marx of the cabinet, some would call him) on Wednesday in the legislature.

Gaping Hole

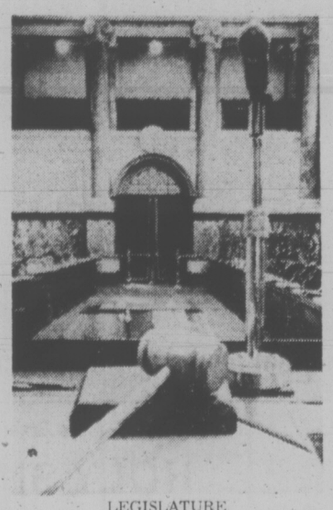
Bennett asked him how many jobs would be created by premier Dave Barrett's junket to the Orient last spring, knowing of course that the tangible results to date have been near invisible. Lauk replied: "More than your daddy created when he went to Europe." Bennett plunged on with his supplementary question: "Am I to understand then that no jobs were created?"

He fell into the gaping hole and seemed not to understand why the house erupted into guffaws. Even Social Credit MLAs smiled at the unintended joke.

It's not the only example. On Monday, he got tripped up clumsily in asking Attorney-General Alex Macdonald about a confidential memo someone leaked to the Socreds, which suggested that the new provincial sheriffs who have taken over court duties from police officers are to assume further duties next year under new legislation.

Instead of boring in with queries about the substance of the memo, which he said pointed to deteriorating relations between the RCMP and the sheriff's office, Bennett took the line: "Is this an official document?" To which Macdonald easily replied how was he to know, pass it over and he'll look at it. Thus did the only interesting question to come up in question period all week fizzle out because of Bennett's rather roundabout approach. "I've got to find a better way," Bennett said later.

Footnote: Something the New Democratic Party in opposition always seized upon as an opportunity to beat the government around the head—the unemployment figures — sailed right by the present opposition parties this week. Not a question about the October statistics which showed B.C. the single exception to a nationwide decline in the numbers of jobless.



LEGISLATURE
. . . Curtis fibbed daily

The jokes continue in the legislature about Hugh Curtis's switch from the Conservatives to Social Credit. He probably didn't expect such a barrage but the NDP certainly isn't going to avoid such a tempting target, something to distract from its own bushelful of crises. On opening day last week, before MLAs' chairs were even warm, Premier Barrett aimed one: "I didn't know the Titanic needed more crew members." Another day he turned back a question from Curtis about the finance department's lackadaisical attitude towards paying its bills by quipping that if government creditors changed their addresses as often as Curtis changed political parties, no wonder it takes so long to pay them.

But perhaps the witticism which hit closest to home came from one of the Social Credit party's own organizers. He said the new MLA had to go to Mayo clinic before he could join the party. Why? To remove the splinters he had suffered by sitting on the fence so long.

Unofficial deadline for ending the session is Nov. 15. That's when the premier, Health Minister Dennis Cocke and Attorney-General Alex Macdonald are supposed to fly off to the Peoples' Republic of China for an excursion laid on by the Chinese.

But more and more it looks as if the session will go on for most of the month, if the pace of debate is any indicator. It took three days to get second reading of Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich's marketing board bill, the first of seven mostly contentious pieces of legislation to get that far. There seems little chance of disposing of legislation regarding the new rent freeze, assessments stopgap, school wage negotiations and forest industry relief by next Friday — even with the new time limits on debate.

Kooky Politicians

In the November issue of Maclean's there's a piece by Marjorie Nichols, who formerly reported on happenings in the B.C. legislature and now sits in the house of commons press gallery, about some of the kookier politicians in B.C. The speaker, Socreds Harvey Schroeder, Pat Jordan and Ed Smith and New Democrats Hartley Dent, Jim Gorst and Public Works Minister Bill Hartley were the sitting members she named, while past MLAs Phil Gaglardi, Agnes Kripps and John Tisdalle were also nominated for the list of "most peculiar MLAs."

Oddly neglected were several who would make anybody's list. Who could forget Waldo Skillings, a strapping six-footer and former industrial development minister who got into an arm-swinging altercation with a lady Conservative candidate. Or Liberal leader David Anderson himself, ejected from the House five (count 'em five) times last spring in the famed chicken-and-egg wars.

And what about our own premier, famous for flinging the "barnyard frisbee" farther than anyone else last year at a Cariboo rodeo, proud of his title as best bull thrower in B.C.?

C. L. SULZBERGER

Israel Sees Changed Attitude

JERUSALEM — To any state, intelligence is important, in both the diplomatic and military fields, but for two reasons this is especially true in Israel. First of all, because of its habit of graduating generals to high political positions (for example the present premier and foreign minister), this brings to civilian power men accustomed to basing their decisions on technically acquired information.

Secondly, because this is a small country surrounded by enemies and dependent upon military reserves which can be swiftly mobilized rather than professional forces, it has to rely more than most lands on accurate intelligence and its appreciation. The costly process of calling up troops disrupts normal economic life and is avoided unless there is grave danger.

When intelligence goes haywire, as was the case a year ago when the ruling establishment misread its signals, Israel risks destruction. Because of that 1973 error, the system now is under revision.

Devil's Advocates

One modification being studied is the introduction of officers assigned to a permanent doubting role of devil's advocates in order to challenge wrong assumptions. Another is computerizing all data that might program forthcoming trouble so as to demand automatically prompt attention.

The gap between information on a hostile country's known capabilities and conclusions regarding its probable intentions is relatively even larger when applied to foreign than military policy. Yet here, too, Israel is forced to approach problems of war and peace by intelligence analysis. For example, what are Soviet plans in the Mediterranean area and its intentions for the Arabs?

The Israelis feel that Soviet intentions are unchanged. Yet their capabilities have increased because opposition to communism has declined in Turkey, Greece, Italy and Portugal; but Moscow's methods remain in doubt. Yet it undoubtedly exerts pressure through the Middle East on the United States and Europe. Seeking to recoup lost footholds and to retain maximum influence, it thus always keeps an option of either war or peace.

Israel believes the Soviet Union will not prevent another round of Middle East war or abstain from trying to manage its course through arms deliveries, as it did last year. But there is no sign that it is trying to start such a war although it is building up Syrian arms and will resume more limited supplies to Egypt, still skeptically regarded as a friend of Washington.

ANWAR SADAT
. . . Egypt good neighbor?

And because Kissinger's diplomacy shoved Russia out of the current Middle East negotiating picture, Moscow wants to upset his applecart by reconvening the Arab-Israeli talks in Geneva (where Moscow plays a role) and by backing Yasir Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization. This could provide a pro-Soviet foothold in the Palestinian section of Jordan's population — against both King Hussein and Uncle Sam.

Nevertheless, Israel concludes that the current Soviet leadership belongs to the patient old guard that eschews adventure and feels inflation and faltering economies are sufficiently hastening a decline of the West. So this makes the risk of war needless; only a political push here and there is required — as in Jordan, Italy or Portugal.

Against this dismal picture the Israelis set two slightly unfavorable conjectures. The first is the belief that the U.S. now recognizes it had let its conventional weapons stockpile diminish excessively and is righting the balance. The second is a hope that somewhat less unfavorable attitude to Israel is developing in Western Europe.

Mockery

The latter started in France, which has ended its arms embargo on both Israel and its neighbors. This, it is observed here, didn't result from a French initiative but from the fact that President Sadat of Egypt disclosed that Mirage jets, sold to Libya by the French on a guarantee they wouldn't leave that country, had been flown to Egypt and used in last year's war. This made a mockery of Paris denials and forced a policy change.

The potential effect of French arms isn't considered significant for either Israel or the Arabs, only an additive to massive Russian and American supplies. But as a result of changes in political leadership — Giscard d'Estaing for Pompidou, Wilson for Heath, Schmidt for Brandt — it is believed a new West European policy is developing and that somehow this development will favor Israel — despite French contacts with Arafat.

It is hard to reckon why the computer should come up with this conclusion or, indeed, how important to Israel such a trend might ultimately prove. Yet that is the way intelligent intelligence here now is assessed.

A Nature Ramble With Skipper

By Freeman King

Let's go back to Goldstream and see the changes that have taken place since the water has been turned on by the water board and the salmon have come home again. It really is a wonderful sight.

There are about 1,000 chums in the river and they have spread out the entire run and have penetrated upstream to above the concrete bridge that crosses the highway.

In the early morning, the sight is just wonderful, when the fish have scattered along the river and are spawning in the gravel beds. Then as the day advances they seem to hide away under the bushes and rest. Then again at dusk they move on to other places.

It is estimated that they are about 70 per cent females and the rest males. They are in their spawning colors, the males with dark red blotches on their bodies while the females vaunt dark black stripes.

There is considerable fighting going on all the time. This is mainly over territorial rights and sex doesn't seem to matter. They all get into the act. These fish have very large teeth and can cause considerable damage to one another.

This year the salmon seem to be somewhat larger than before, so that might indicate there was plenty of food for them in the sea during the last four years of their wandering.

There are a few coho in the river — we estimate that last weekend there were about two dozen — and we hope there will be more. Now the water in the river is running well it will bring more in from the sea. These are the sport fish, they too have changed into their spawning colors. They have changed from a gun-metal blue to a cherry red and cannot be mistaken for anything else.

As a rule they do not stay in the lower reaches but head upstream as fast as they can to reach the upper gravel beds in the campsite area of the park. Sometimes you'll see a lone coho in a pool and wonder what happened to its partner, because this kind of fish generally picks a mate and travels together.

On Sunday we had about 8,000 to 10,000 people out to see the sight and I must say that on the whole they were well-behaved, though there is always some dunderhead that doesn't seem to care or doesn't know how to behave along a spawning stream. They will bring out their dogs and let them into the water, which spooks the fish for hundreds of yards downstream. Others actually walk in the water which has an equally bad effect on the fish.

I wonder how many people who came on Sunday noticed anything besides the fish, for there are dramatic changes in the flora. The leaves are now tumbling down and their colors are beautiful. In many places new buds have formed for 1975.

Army Shoots Back

In your editorial United Appeal Needs a Hand in the Nov. 6 issue, you state: "And over 90 cents of every donated dollar goes to services ranging from The Salvation Army to the Native Friendship Centre."

For the record, I would like to point out that The Salvation Army, is NOT a member agency of the United Way campaign and, therefore, receives no financial assistance for its many humanitarian services from this appeal.

Annually, in Victoria, the army conducts its own Red Shield Appeal each May, as is the case generally across the nation. Indeed, the Red Shield Appeal locally has been a matter of history for almost thirty years.

We wish the United Way campaign all the very best, for we know that the member agencies require the funds to carry out their much appreciated services.

Meanwhile, we thank you for this opportunity of reminding readers that the Army's services are also feeling the bite of inflation.—Stan Ratcliffe, Public Relations Officer, Salvation Army.

BROADBENT
. . . limp attack

Why Did They Do It?

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — The high winter season of politics—full of incidents, questions and unsatisfactory answers—is upon us. For examples:

Why would Mrs. Trudeau go off on a lengthy junket to Japan, under the private auspices and the funding of a Hong Kong multi-millionaire, immediately after catching the sympathetic attention of most of the nation and much of the Western World with her TV revelations about how much she wants to be a wife a mother and an individual, alone and in privacy, away from the onus of her husband's office?

Why would some commentators—for example, Montreal Star TV critic, Joan Irwin—come to the conclusion that Mrs. Trudeau has been unfairly exploited, first by the media, secondly by some politicians? The latter, according to this criticism, are forcing the young woman into a public role, seemingly for advantage of the PM and the Liberal party. That's hard to understand. As for the unfair media, Mrs. Trudeau has given much of herself to reporters or interviewers on only three occasions in her life.

Why would Ed Broadbent move a motion on the beef situation, using the slaughter of calves in Quebec as the argument?

When the speaker approved the motion for an emergency debate in the House, Broadbent had the lead-off shot in a four hour debate. Between the acceptance of the motion at 2:10 p.m. and his speech at 8:05 p.m., there was ample time to whip up some facts and arguments of strength and persuasiveness. His speech was limp and unconvincing, except to convince that he knows little about agriculture and less about the livestock industry.

Why would Gene Whelan, the minister of agriculture, assert in the aforementioned debate, not elliptically but directly, that he is the best minister of agriculture ever?

History isn't Mr. Whelan's strong suit. Nor is it the notable quality in agricultural discussion. Some farmers have been reported as praising Whelan to this degree. Some of his colleagues, delighted with his impact on the rural vote in the last campaign, have indulged in such hyperbole. Buy why would the man himself do it? A dozen years ago, a minister of finance, Donald Fleming, asserted that no minister had ever worked harder or longer hours —he lived to regret it. Similar judgments used to be made about Bryce Mackasey when he was minister of labor, usually by trade union people who felt they finally had a minister on their side. The affable Bryce did not discourage such estimates.

Indeed, he would occasionally make the odd modest, dismissing reference to them. To repeat, why would a politician be silly enough to say: "Anyone who says that I have not worked on those problems and done more than any other minister of agriculture of any government just does not know the facts"?

Why would Paul Martin, a veteran of 39 years in Parliament, go into the Senate to give his swan song without having anything more pointed to say than that he was proud to have served the democratic process and that Parliament, despite criticisms, is a fine, important institution. The eulogies from his colleagues which followed, all well-meant and sentimental, were no more cogent.

Why would Don Jamieson, thought by many to be the most adroit politician of the old school in the cabinet take the risks he did over the leadership bid of Joey Smallwood? Mr. Jamieson jumped a Liberal MP, David Rooney, for supporting Smallwood and according to the latter, threatened his future political career. Then by making his antagonism to the return of Mr. Smallwood so open (as did the former Newfoundland titan of the federal Liberals, Jack Pickersgill).

Jamieson brought a demand from Mr. Smallwood for an inquiry into television and cable licences in Newfoundland. Such TV licences and their exploitation made both the financial and public springboard for the Jamieson political career. If Mr. Smallwood persists and the CRTC and its head, Pierre Juneau, do launch an investigation, whatever its conclusions, there'll be a dark cloud over the Jamieson political future.

Why would the Premier of Ontario and his party bumble into the Carleton East by-election the way they have, immediately after their disappointing rout in Cornwall?

Consider the drawbacks the Premier arranged. He would replace a highly popular (locally) member and former minister (Bert Lawrence) in a far from safe seat with a candidate who is very attractive (Mayor Benoit of Ottawa) but who is very well-known to have been a capital "L" Liberal until a few short weeks ago.

Carleton East is excellent Liberal territory, held federally by John Turner, a politician with a good organization that has still its personnel and techniques in hand after a hard charge in the July election. Further, Ottawa is the political news centre of Canada, much more so than Toronto; therefore, an inordinate media interest in the campaign was assured.

The Talk Drones On Despite New Rules

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

"Democracy has died in B.C." shouted the leather-lunged member from South Peace River as his benchmate chorused "closure, closure."

The colorful hyperboles from Social Credit ranks are common fare in the legislative circus and this week was no exception, as MLAs began preparing for a hot and heavy fall session.

The point of complaint was the first imposition of limits on debate in the B.C. legislature.

First victim of the new restriction was Socred Frank Richter, MLA from Boundary-Similkameen, who was rudely and unceremoniously interrupted by Speaker Gordon Dowding in the midst of a tiresome debate on the merits of the government's new marketing legislation.

Richter, who seldom speaks in the house on any occasion, was informed that his 40-minute allotment for second reading debate of the bill had expired and he was to take his seat.

The Socred benches exploded in righteous indignation reminiscent of their outrage late last spring when the limits were first established by the house over opposition protests.

The critics warned then that limits would signal the end of democracy in B.C. and Don Phillips, the voice of South Peace, plaintively cried the next step would be the end of free elections.

But despite those woeful predictions, the new limits — much to the distress of weary members of the press and numb observers in the public galleries — have had little effect on the tedious course of debate.

The crunch will come, however, in the spring session when the opposition will be faced with strict limits on discussions of budget estimates — the time when MLAs can scrutinize the financial operations and policy of each government department.

But the only effect so far this session has been a noticable effort by the opposition to tighten up and improve their strategy of attack on the government.

Debate has hardly been limited.

First on the agenda this week, for example, was second reading of the government's new marketing bill. The reading, which leads to approval in principle for the legislation, occupied three afternoon sittings and one evening session — a total of nearly 14 hours.

While the new rules entitle each member, other than party leaders, to only 40 minutes of debate, the Socreds proved right off the bat that rules can be circumvented.

Opposition leader Bill Bennett simply moved the bill be hoisted for six months and the motion carried with it the option for all members to speak for 40 minutes on the principle of the motion before a vote was taken and the house returned to regular timed debate on the principle of the bill.

Conceivably, the opposition could have moved amendments to that motion or presented other motions which would also have added another round of debate.

When the bill moves into committee stage for third and final reading in the house, the limits are even weaker. Each MLA is alloted 30 minutes every time he takes his turn in debate but the rules of committee allow him to speak as often as he wishes on each section of the bill.

Those rules will give the opposition an easy avenue to prolong debate, for example, on legislation like the government's rent control amendments to the Landlord and Tenant Act.

Second reading of those amendments began this week and the opposition were out in full force to attack the new 10.6 per cent rent ceiling established under the bill.

Once they run out of steam in the initial reading, the members can simply sit back and wait for third reading where the section laying down the rent ceiling will provide an ideal opportunity for a second attack with virtually no time limits, other than the traditional rule that honorable members shall not be "tedious and repetitious."

Premier Barrett's hopes for a short, sweet sitting, finishing in time for his trip to China next Friday, have quickly fallen by the boards.

But the blame can hardly be laid on the opposition despite their understandable desire to keep the legislative forum going, to make their headlines and to hammer at the NDP while the government's public image is so tarnished and vulnerable.

The government billed the session as a "quickie" sitting to deal with the mess they created with the new assessment legislation.

Then they said new rent control legislation would be brought into deal with the mess they created in the rental accommodation field.

Then they bowed to pressure for action in the slumping forest industry and promised wood chip legislation.

Now they've brought in a bill to deal with the messy impasse in teacher-trustee bargaining and the list of business for the legislature grows longer and longer as the issues get hotter and heavier.

A Voice of Realism

By ANTHONY LEWIS

In Western Europe, which many would consider a densely populated area, there are now about 85 people per square kilometer. South Asia, on the most cautious estimates of population growth, will add 140 people per square kilometer over the next 25 years.

There is virtually no unused farmland in India, Bangladesh, Pakistan, Sri Lanka. The chance of their obtaining the capital for intensive development of agriculture on the scale needed to feed the indicated population is near zero. To avoid starvation deaths in the tens of millions, South Asia will depend increasingly on outside food aid. By early in the next century, on the population projections, the aid needed would equal total U.S. agricultural production.

Those two paragraphs are abstracted from a recent speech by Dr. Philip Handler, president of the U.S. National Academy of Sciences. Many of us have had the experience of reading something that dispelled comfortable assumptions and forced us to open our minds. That happened to me in reading Handler's speech, "On the State of Man."

The fundamental problem addressed by Handler is the pressure of growing population and production on the world's resources — and on man's organizational capacity. There are now four billion people on earth. The number is doubling about every 35 years. The poor are growing very much faster than the rich, and a new study by the Environmental Fund shows that the rate of population growth has actually increased in some less-developed countries despite "family planning" programs.

The problem is most acute, by far, in South Asia. Resources there are scarce, the population huge and growing, the prospect of multiplying food production dim.

Handler raises the possibility that the developed world may simply decide to "forget" the countries of South Asia — "to give them up as hopeless." Then, he says, "the adjustments required by the rest of the world as humanity seeks to come into equilibrium with our host planet will still be severe but can be feasible, and one can look to the prospect of a decent standard of living for the rest of mankind — assuming, of course, that the developing nations of Latin America and Africa will soon adopt effective population policies."

He evidently would like to see a massive program of aid and development for the countries of South Asia. But if we do not do that, he says as a scientist that it would be better to do nothing — because a lesser effort would be "counter-productive." It would encourage continued population growth — and more deaths later.

"Cruel as it may sound," Handler says, "if the developed nations do not intend th colossal all-out effort commensurate with this task, then it may be wiser to let nature take itscourse as Aristotle described it: 'From time to time it is necessary that pestilence, famine and war prune the luxurient growth of the human race.' "

Even without counting South Asia, Handler says, the rich countries will have to divert immense amounts of capital to the less developed world if they want to avert economic disaster, dangerous resentments and growing terrorism. That means cutting back their own development — perhaps even an absolute decline in per capita income in the developed countries.

It is difficult to suggest the scope of Handler's vision in a newspaper column. His discussion of the food problem is only one part of a large canvas. He sees famine, climatic changes, inflation and environmental damage as warning signals of basic dislocation in man's relationship to earth. Essentially he is pleading with those who have money and power, especially Americans, to abandon the illusion that they can go on as they have, multiplying numbers and appetites.

My favorite recent example of desperate optimism was an article in The Economist of London last summer mocking the concern about resources and the environment. Why if all countries grew food as efficiently as the Netherlands does today, the article said, the world would have enough to feed 60 billion people; it would be burried under rice three feet deep.

There was only one little problem that The Economist forgot in its vision of a boundless future: energy. If every country poured oil and fertilizer into its agricultural production as the Netherlands does, almost all the world's available energy supply would have to be used for farming alone. The prospect is about as realistic as raising everyone to an American standard of living — which Handler notes would require us to multiply our use of critical minerals, many already in short supply, by seventeen.

It will be difficult to dismiss Philip Handler as a cranky crier of doom. He is a respected biochemist, an eminent adviser to governments, a man of wide experience and common sense. His voice is not so much gloomy as uncompromisingly realistic. How good it would be if some political leaders heard his voice and understood, instead of pinning buttons on themselves and insisting that all will soon again be for the best in this best of all possible worlds.

Stanfield Blames Wrong People

THE GLOBE AND MAIL

Such a grumpy Robert Stanfield talking to the television interviewer about why he lost the July 8 election. Grumping at Margaret Trudeau ("Actually, I think I'm a very loveable and attractive guy. And I never felt it necessary to get my wife to say that, either"). Grumping at the press ("... Journalists sort of lay down and let Mr. Trudeau walk all over them. They allowed him to conduct exactly the kind of tightly controlled campaign that he wanted to conduct. I just got the impression that the journalistic corps for the most part was ... rather frightened").

Oh?

Mrs. Trudeau can make her own response; she seems to use the communications media well. For ourselves, we do not want to be defensive but we would very much like Mr. Stanfield to expand. Perhaps in the furor of what has generally been conceded to be one of the dullest election campaigns in Canadian history, we missed the tread of the Prime Minister's undoubtedly well-shod feet upon our backs.

Or did he tippy-toe across the press at night when it was sleeping off the rigors of having criticized him by day for failing to deal straightforwardly with most of the problems facing Canada, notably inflation?

Mr. Stanfield says the press allowed the prime minister to conduct exactly the kind of campaign he wanted. Allowed? Surely, campaigns are organized by political parties and, surely the election campaign is not that far back in history for Mr. Stanfield to have forgotten the lesson learned by his own party: that no party has complete control over its own campaign.

Mr. Stanfield's Conservatives set out with the strategy of first identifying inflation — and the Liberal government's failure to deal with it — as the prime issue and then introducing the Conservative alternative of a 90-day wage and price freeze. Except the other parties would not hand Mr. Stanfield his timetable on a plate and the wage and price freeze became the issue instead of the Liberals' nonhandling of inflation. And then, when Mr. Stanfield was just about to unveil party policy on other issues, Mr. Trudeau outflanked him by beating him to the wire with the government's many promises.

Perhaps Mr. Stanfield needs strategists?

And perhaps the press did not go far enough in pinning Mr. Trudeau down on his campaign promises. But at least all of them were presented with a question mark (as time has most certainly shown they should have been) . . . which brings us to the final point: Mr. Stanfield's comment about somebody being frightened. Well, the public did seem to be frightened of a price and wage freeze that most people — including a lot of Conservatives — never understood and never had explained to them. That may have had something to do with the election outcome.

The Delicatessen Debate

By JOHN NICHOL

This is the year of the big crunch between the farmer and the consumer. It has been coming for a long time. This year food prices are at an all time high, and the farmer's costs have gone up so that he can't make anything on his products.

Many farm products are handled through marketing boards and co-operative agencies of various kinds. These were set up, many in the 1930s, to protect the farmer from the ravages of the free market place and to try to give him some protection from the big buyers who had all the economic muscle.

The job of the marketing agencies was to keep prices up by controlling and manipulating supply. And in those days the consumers were just as disorganized and helpless as the farmers. So, even though some very strange events occurred in the name of stable farm prices, no one complained much.

In Brazil for instance, mountains of coffee were burned to keep them off the market. In the United States surplus potatoes were dyed blue so that they were unusable. Payments were made to farmers by governments so that they would not produce certain products.

There is a story about a California farmer who said that he had had a pretty good year not growing soybeans, but he figured he could do a little better if he decided not to grow lettuce instead. The '30s were not years in which a story like that pulled even a thin smile.

In case you think that these phenomena are somehow special to North America, let me tell you a story that I recently heard in Japan.

In early October of 1974 a geologist who works at the Volcano Research Station near Mt. Fuji took a field trip with a few geological students. They were moving through the foothill country and came to a small steep valley where a farmer was growing oranges on the hillside.

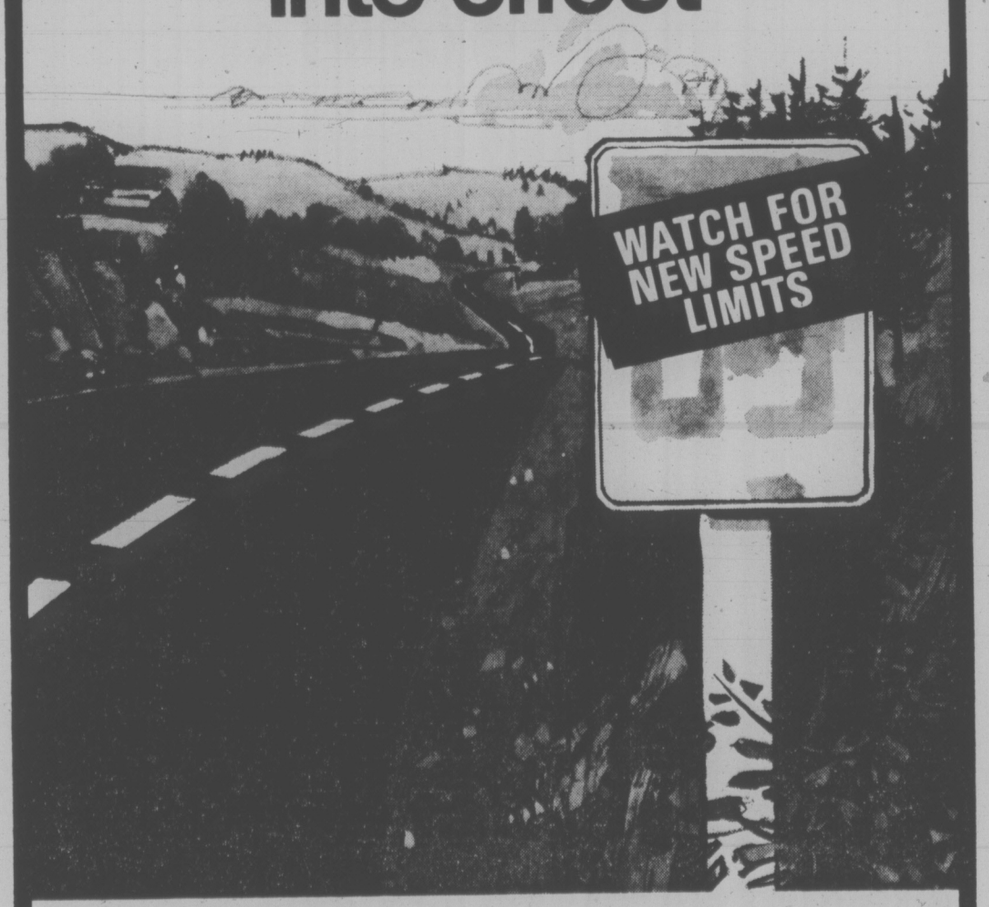
When they arrived at the gate of the farm they saw the farmer and his helpers knocking oranges off the trees with long sticks. Why? The farmer said that good oranges were in over supply and that he was doing his bit to keep the price up. Would he give the geologists a few of the oranges? No — he would not. Could they then perhaps buy a few for lunch? No—they could not. What was he going to do with them? Bury them, was the answer. And that was that.

In the agriculture business the deliberate restriction of supply is not an uncommon procedure. Such procedures were always publicly known and although no one really approved of them, there was little outcry. But things have changed. The consumers are now highly organized and have effective voices in government. And there are serious famines in the world and the food crisis will get worse. And so the old policies designed to maintain farm prices are being publicly condemned.

Well, the farmer has to make a decent living somehow. The consumer has to buy the groceries at what he thinks of as a reasonable price. And the world needs every extra ounce of food that every farmer can produce.

The answers will not come easily. And as these pressures and counter pressures work themselves out, beef, eggs, chickens and hamburgers will continue to dominate our national news. By next spring we will be wondering if it's a country we have here, or a delicatessen.

safer speed limits now coming into effect



The new reduced speed limits are now coming into effect and motorists are requested to watch for the changes as the new signs appear on our highways. Speed reductions will vary throughout the Province according to traffic volume, terrain, population density and road standards. The Government has established these new limits in the interest of public safety.

Serving Two Masters, Who Gets the Cash?

YOUR TAXES

By I. H. ASPER

A tax problem for Canadian business which is likely to recur with increasing frequency is that relating to the pricing of inter-company goods and services.

The difficulty arises primarily when two or more companies, which are related to or affiliated with one another do business together but are located, for tax purposes, in different countries.

For example, a Canadian manufacturer sets up a subsidiary company to market its goods in the United States. The question arises as to what price the parent company should charge the American subsidiary for the goods. If the price is high, the profit in Canada and the Canadian tax will be higher and the U.S. profits and tax correspondingly lower.

That may be acceptable to the Canadian government, but American tax officials, wanting a fair share of the tax on international profits, will frown. And so will the Canadian government, if the situation is reversed.

The Canadian tax law, and the United States' as well, deals with this inter-company pricing situation in a number of ways. It begins by providing that where two companies are not dealing with each other at arm's length, i.e. as strangers or competitors, because they are financially interested in each other's welfare, then if one acquires something from the other, regardless of how much is actually paid, the seller will be treated for tax purposes as though he had been paid the fair market value and the buyer will be taxed as though he had received the fair market value.

The law then goes on to extend this principle to transactions between related companies in different countries.

This is essential to protect the Canadian treasury. Without this kind of regulation, the Canadian manufacturer in our example could set up a subsidiary in a tax free country to act as its world sales agency, sell it the goods at cost, make no taxable profit in Canada and have all the profit earned in the tax-free subsidiary company.

There are an infinite number of variations on the theme, particularly in international trade, and there are a substantial number for tax law provisions which can create serious problems for even the company which tries to comply with the law.

For example, Company A, a Canadian manufacturer, selling its goods in Canada, decides to expand to the United States. For a variety of reasons, it doesn't open a sales office, but rather, incorporates Company B in the United States. Company B enters into an exclusive buying contract and in consideration of guaranteeing a minimum volume of sales, gets a 15 per cent discount off the price Company A is selling the goods to its wholesalers in Canada.

Company A makes $50,000 and Company B makes $50,000. Both pay tax on their respective profits to the respective governments. Now the Canadian tax authorities come along and claim that A sold the goods to B at below market value. They say A should have made another $25,000, so they tax A on that basis.

But B has already paid tax on that $25,000 to the United States government, and the American authorities refuse to allow the price adjustment and tax rebate.

The result would be double taxation and could severely impair Canada's opportunity for expanded export sales were it not for some relief against double taxation being available through the Canada-U.S. Tax Treaty. However, Canada doesn't have all that many treaties with other governments yet, and there is still serious risk for Canadian business in its international dealings.

Even the Canadian tax authorities aren't always sympathetic. A real life sample of the potential tax trap was nearly inflicted on Aluminum Company of Canada in a case heard by the Federal Court recently.

Alcan set up a subsidiary in Jamaica called Aljam to mine bauxite and convert it to Alumina, which is the basic material for aluminum metal. In a rather complicated series of transactions, Alcan bought the Alumina from Aljam and sold some of it to a competitor in Canada.

After a few years, Alcan's customer cancelled the contract and was required to pay Alcan a cancellation fee of $3.7 million, on which Alcan paid Canadian tax. The Jamaica tax officials heard about it and concluded that the Jamaica company must have been selling the Alumina at too low a price, so they reassessed Aljam as though it had earned 75 per cent of the $3.7 million cancellation fee.

This would have seen $3.7 million taxed in Canada, and the same $2.7 million of it taxed again in Jamaica — a clear case of double taxation. Aljam negotiated a settlement in Jamaica, agreeing to take into income $1.4 million of the Alcan income, and pay Jamaican tax on it.

Alcan paid the $1.4 million to Aljam who paid Jamaican tax, and Alcan deducted that amount from its Canadian income on the ground that it was a price adjustment for the products sold to it.

Not so, said the Canadian Revenue Department, which refused to allow the deduction on the ground that it was not a business expense, but rather, a non-deductible capital payment to protect a capital asset, namely, Alcan's source of raw material supply.

Fortunately for the taxpayer, torn, as it was, between two governments, Mr. Justice Daryl Heald agreed with the reasonableness of Alcan's contention and the deduction was allowed.

The fact that this taxpayer narrowly escaped a disastrous tax accident points out the need for Canada to continue its efforts to expand its anti-double taxation treaties with more countries, and in the meantime, for Canadians wishing to do business abroad, to be very careful in setting inter-company pricing policy.

Bonuses Handed Out To Alcan Workers

KITIMAT (CP) — About $600,000 in bonuses will be paid today to 1,850 hourly-rated workers of the Aluminum Co. of Canada as rewards for staying on the job for the past six months.

The individual bonuses, which were banked by the company for the employees, will run as high as $775 and will average $335.

The bonus plan was instituted in may by agreement between the company and the Canadian Association of Smelter and Allied Workers.

It recognized the effect of inflation on wages and the high turnover of manpower in northern British Columbia industries, particularly the Alcan smelter.

A stability bonus fund was created and banked for each employee from May 6 to Sept. 8. The employees agreed to stay at least to Oct. 24. From Sept. 8 to Oct. 24 the bonus, related to wage rates, was added to regular pay cheques.

The banked portion of the bonus — credited to each employee for four months — is being paid today.

For future service, the company and the union has agreed on a service bonus in an agreement signed Oct. 24.

This will be $150 a year for the first five years of service and $225 a year for the fifth and subsequent years.

Grit Rips Rent Controls

Apartment builders should be offered financial incentives to encourage construction in return for agreements to control rent, a Liberal MLA suggested in the legislature Friday.

Gordon Gibson (North Vancouver - Capilano, presented a lengthy criticism of the government's new rent control policy contained in amendments to the Landlord and Tenant Act and he offered some alternatives to protect tenants as well as encourage apartment construction.

Besides financial incentives to builders in the form of capital construction grants, Gibson suggested the government's $30 annual renters' grant be re-organized "on a humane basis related to needs."

Once those on low and fixed incomes are granted rent support, Gibson said rent controls "should be phased out over three to five years."

Thirdly, the government should continue some system of rent reviews to allow landlords with special financial problems to argue their case for higher rents.

Gibson said the government's legislation with its 10.6 per cent freeze is "more than depressing."

It will create "the horror" of a two-price system for rental accommodation because new buildings will not be restricted to any ceiling for five years and rents will soar in those rental units, he said.

But the Liberal said he also doubted builders will be tempted by the five-year exemption because they do not trust the NDP government.

Housing Minister Lorne Nicolson was heckled and booed in a short speech defending the legislation.

He argued that new construction is going on in B.C. and said "it's getting embarrassing" because he has been invited to so many official openings of new housing units.

Blame for the shortage of rental accommodation rests on the shoulders of the federal Liberal government, he said, because they first created a tax shelter to encourage professional people to invest in apartments and then wiped out the shelter and with it new construction.

Conservative Leader Scott Wallace charged Macdonald "has come to the wong conclusion" on rental accommodation.

"There's one serious contradiction," he said, "You say housing accommodation is a universal right and yet you choose to have the owner subsidize it rather than subsidizing it for him out of general revenue.

"Your philosophy falls apart. This caper we're going through with this bill — all that will happen is fewer units will be built while the population will increase and it'll be some disaster."

"It's the poorest method of searching to achieve a goal," said Wallace arguing for higher rent controls.

The goal, he said is to provide "decent housing for tenants at prices they can afford."

"You can't shake your head at the cost of housing Mr. Attorney-General — it has to go up like any other commodity."

He called for subsidy by demand to be paid in cash to the consumer and a supply subsidy to be paid to landlords for property occupied.

Egg Figures' Review Set

Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich said Friday his department is reviewing British Columbia Egg Marketing Board figures.

Stupich's comment came after a federal official Thursday told a special parliamentary committee investigating egg marketing that the board's procedures for calculating costs "would never be accepted by the income tax department."

PHILLIPS' PLAN GETS BARRETT NOD

Premier Dave Barrett said Friday the government likely will adopt Vancouver Mayor Art Phillips' suggestion that municipalities be allowed to reassess rezoned properties for 1975 assessment rolls.

The government introduced legislation Monday to freeze 1975 property tax assessments at 1974 rates, while a more complete study of property taxes is made.

The recommendation for the freeze was made by the legislature's standing committee on municipal affairs, which said 1975 was too soon to apply the full effects of the new Assessment Equalization Act passed last spring.

Vancouver city council became alarmed Thursday when it discovered that CP Rail's Marathon Realty would gain $500,000 as a result of the interim legislation because rezoning earlier this year increased the value of its land on False Creek by about $25 million.

The rezoning was to allow residential and commercial development of the former industrial area.

Since it occurred in 1974, without an amendment council could only assess the land at its previous value.

'Long, Boring Soap Opera'

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Paint a picture in one flat color — write a musical composition on one note — produce a play all on one level of tempo and tone. The result is almost inevitably boredom.

Which partly explains what went wrong with the Bastion Theatre version of Ibsen's A Doll's House as seen at its Friday opening at McPherson Playhouse.

In all fairness one must believe that the actors are capable of giving us much more effective theatre. But they, adapter Marian Waldman and director Ron Hartmann, were all, it seemed under the compulsion of presenting the Ibsen drama as — in the words of the author — "a piece of real life."

But Ibsen was speaking in his own time when he recommended to a translator the pursuit of "everyday speech." He was not looking ahead 100 years to another time and place.

Miss Waldman's adaptation succeeds in eliminating the 19th century from the dialogue so that it becomes an anachronism to the costumes and to the plot which could only belong to that century.

Also, in an apparent further rejection of theatricality, most of the play is performed at a drawing room level of energy and a ho-hum tempo that turns the Victoria era classic into a long boring soap opera.

In the first act Irena Mayeska's Nora is effective. She is brittle, buoyant, a little girl figure playing grown-up.

But of course Nora is really a grown-up playing little girl — playing the game, filling in the outline her husband has decreed. But in the play's denoument we must see the real woman emerge out of torment, and be profoundly moved by her truth and courage.

As this process evolves Mayeska becomes less effective and one is not convinced that she is that person who will walk out the door, out of her husband's life and into a strange world.

Peter Brockington's Krogstad is a disaster. A stiff-legged, mumbling, almost comic figure. In fact the audience got its only laughs of the evening at lines of his that had no comic intent.

There is not a vestige of implacable bitterness or threat about the characterization and that is another important reason why — Krogstad being so germaine to the plot — this production doesn't work.

Best and most consistent performances are those of Michael Ball, somewhat lacking in Victorian chauvinism but achieving fair light and shade as Torvald, Nora's husband, and Kim Yaroshevskya distinct and at times, touching, as Mrs. Linde.

Claude Bede, appearing uncomfortable as the doomed friend, Dr. Rank, must have been directed to play the role as a stoic, for by not so much as a single wince does he indicate that his fatal spinal disease will kill him within hours.

Doll's House continues at the McPherson through Nov. 16.

Eric Grimshaw made it back but not all the way

They Would Like To Serve Again

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

On Monday at 11 a.m. we will stand quietly and remember our war dead.

But what of the living dead — the comrades who made it back — but not into the full stream of civilian life?

This is the question Eric Grimshaw, 58, of 617 Admirals, asks for himself and thousands like him.

After more than 30 years of soldiering, in the British and Canadian armies, he feels more displaced than those who wandered the world, political aliens of their own countries, during the Second World War.

There's a tinge of envy when he sees how today's armed forces are treated — good salaries, substantial pensions, many of them able to work at second jobs during their years of service, preparing themselves for the day when the umbilical cord between them and service life is cut, throwing them into the civilian stream.

Grimshaw is representative of the in-betweeners — those who signed up when service pay was minimal but motivation great. In love with the intangibles — the sense of belonging, the lure of travel — neither they nor their superiors made plans for the years ahead.

As Grimshaw explains, men like him hit the civilian labor market with "no trade unless you like to consider a machine gunner, commando, rifleman and similar trades" a negotiable product.

Grimshaw signed up with the British army when he was 15, spending 10 years and two months overseas before he was able to go home.

His time was up in 1945. He wanted to sign on again.

"They wouldn't have me," he says, "I'd have dearly loved to have signed on again."

He said the main reason for the rejection was that he had been wounded in the shoulder with a German bullet.

Still in love with the army and unskilled in any other trade, he went to Calgary, joining up with the 2nd Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry.

In 1966 his days with the Canadian army were over, too.

The combined result of his soldiering was a pension of $236, defective hearing, suspected diabetes and the old shoulder wound plus an extra bonus — the bullet which did it, given him by the German doctor who removed it after he was taken prisoner.

Since that time he's been in a limbo — too old for army life and unprepared for challenging civilian work.

He's an enigma to the younger generation and an embarassment to his peers, who had so many years in 'civvy street' in which to make a life.

He'll be there at the Cenotaph on Monday, wearing his poppy and the row of medals that sum up the meaningful part of his life.

Lost in this world, he wonders, would he do it again.

He would.

"It was the only thing I knew," he says. "I've been a soldier . . . it's the only thing I knew."

Drinkers to Get the Word

Compulsory Counselling Soon for Drivers

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

The never-ending stream of impaired drivers weaving from car to police station and through the courts will soon find something new in store for them besides the traditional fine, loss of licence and embarrassing criminal record — compulsory attendance at a special course.

Starting the end of this month, the course will involve meeting on four successive Thursday nights from 7:30 p.m. to 10 p.m. at the Saanich provincial court room.

Victoria traffic court Judge Fred Green has had no trouble finding candidates.

In Monday's court session this week 17 persons appeared charged with drinking driving offences.

That was a particularly heavy list. The average works out to about five a day, Green estimates.

His problem is trying to sort out who should go on the course and who should not.

Organizers of the program, the Alcoholism Foundation of B.C. hope to limit each session to 20 "students".

"We feel that is the maximum number to stimulate free and easy discussion in the group," says Cathie Perkins, supervisor of the foundation's Victoria branch.

The attorney-general's department, strongly supporting the program and agreeing to fund it through the Alcohol and Drug Commission, would like to see all persons convicted of impaired driving ordered to take the course.

And that goal may be realized too if the program proves successful.

"Right now all we can do is touch the tip of the iceberg," Green acknowledges.

GREEN
. . . who should go?

The course, modelled after a program in Phoenix, Arizona, has in the past year already been instituted in Nanaimo, Prince George and Calgary.

The results so far have been encouraging.

The instructor of the Prince George course reported "a significant change in the attitude of participants."

A committee was formed in Victoria on April 23 to implement the program here.

The biggest stumbling block, and cause for delay, was in finding a co-ordinator. The problem was surmounted last week when the committee recommended hiring Frank Taylor.

Taylor, a retired army instructor and freelance instructor of the defensive driving course at Camosun College, took over the next day, Oct. 31.

Miss Perkins says his ability to combine "firm discipline" with "a sincere interest in helping people rehabilitate their ways" will spell the difference between success or failure.

Taylor says he expects some initial resistance from his "students", who are all forced to attend as a condition of probation set by the judge.

Using films, visual aids, group discussion and arranging lectures conducted by various resource people, Taylor hopes to first shock, then cajole his students into analyzing the reasons why they drove while drunk.

The approach won't be a didactic one, Miss Perkins says.

"The whole aim is to help these people change their attitude to driving when they have been drinking.

"It is not our business to stop them drinking . . . but we feel it is everyone's business to stop them from drinking and driving."

Local Supermarkets Eyeing Eat-Now, Pay-Later Plan

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The next big target for credit card companies is the neighborhood supermarket — and so far the response has been mixed.

In Victoria, the Warehouse food chain of four supermarkets this week began offering a "Chargex for food" service.

However, in Vancouver, Friday, Canada Safeway announced it will end its Master Charge experiment on Tuesday because customers do not seem to be interested.

Ron Muller, manager of the Langford Warehouse Food Store, said his company jumped into the charge card service because he is convinced it is the coming thing.

"We are a little ahead of our time but we wanted to be first," he said.

He said he is convinced Chargex willl increase the volume of sales and therefore no price increases will be necessary to pay for the added service.

"If we have to raise prices because of this then we would quit and go back to cash sales," Muller said.

He said handling customers through a credit card is faster than processing a cheque but a little slower than a cash sale.

Some consumer groups have opposed the credit card system in supermarkets on the grounds it could slow the service and would add to food costs. The cost to food stores for the credit card service is about 3 per cent.

No Collection Problems

However, the store has the benefit of instant cash and no collection problem. As soon as a sale is registered with the credit card company, the amount of the sale is credited to the bank account of the store. The credit card company guarantees the money unless the credit card used is void because it has expired or been stolen.

Muller said application forms for the charge card are available at Warehouse stores but the card is issued through the banks.

Meanwhile, in Vancouver a spokesman for Canada Safeway said the company has decided against using the credit card system.

The company began using Master Charge cards at six stores in the Vancouver area in July as an experiment.

"However, no one seemed to be interested. I guess paying cash for food is just a habit that people didn't want to change."

Safeway said it could not get a reading on how efficient the charge card system was because it got very little use during the four-month experiment.

Super Valu offers a charge system for food in its Park Royal store but this is done through Eaton's. Otherwise, the only major food stores offering charging facilities in Vancouver are department stores.

In Victoria Eaton's, Woodward's and The Warehouse offer charge facilities for food.

New Appointments To Police Boards

Appointments to the new Oak Bay and Saanich police boards were approved by cabinet Friday.

The five-member boards replace the old three-man police commissions and were created by the Police Act last spring to provide broader community representation on the councils which direct B.C.'s 12 municipal police forces.

The Oak Bay board will include Mayor Brian Smith, who is automatically chairman, three members appointed by cabinet from municipal council nominees and one member chosen by council.

Ken Murphy, a member of the old Oak Bay Police Commission, is the municipal appointee and cabinet has chosen retired Air Force officer and now university student Richard Kilshaw, investment dealer Michael Manning and Teresa Reksten, a housewife who also served on the old commission.

Saanich Mayor Ed Lum will serve with municipal appointee John Tribe, the former municipal clerk, and cabinet appointees Geoff Vantreight, wholesale florist and Saanich farmer, Miles Primrose, a gas station operator, and Kory Regan, curriculum consultant with Greater Victoria school board.

A spokesman in the attorney-general's department said 10 of the 12 boards have been established so far and the last two will be set up next week.

With appointment of the final boards, the old Police Act and its commissions will be repealed.

WOMAN KILLED

An elderly Victoria woman died Friday night two hours after being struck down by a car at Cook and McClure.

Victoria police said Annie Smith, 71, of 777 Cook, was walking with a friend across Cook at 7:35 p.m. when she was hit by a car driven by Allen Fokkema, 18, of 3571 Calumet.

She was taken to Victoria General Hospital with multiple injuries.

The friend saw the car coming and jumped clear, police said.

A spokesman said it was raining heavily at the time and visibility was poor.

Behind the Hip, a Belted Case-Knife

THERE WAS A TIME when a young man walking a town street with a sheath-knife on his belt would have attracted considerable attention. But repetition has a way of reducing the startling to the commonplace, and I no longer stare when I spot a cased blade riding jauntily alongside a denim-clad hip.

This sign of our times interests me, though, and I've wondered what message the snickersee worn in public proclaims.

'I have a sting, and am prepared to use it.' Is that the warning?

Sometimes, no doubt.

An alarmist might even point to knife-wearing in Canada, find a parallel in American handgun-toting, and draw some dark conclusions about the new barbarism. These would be justified at least in part. The bearing of arms by the private citizen becomes more prevalent in violent times.

As a non-alarmist, however, I'm inclined to take such theorizing with a grain of salt. In spite of a move by Vancouver to outlaw the belt-knife within its limits, the federal authority takes what impresses me as a more reasonable view.

Unless circumstances suggest otherwise, and with one notable exception, it regards the knife as a tool and lays down the law accordingly.

(The exception is the zip, slip or switch blade — a nasty piece of business designed for anti-social purposes and strictly banned in Canada.)

The man in woods or work gear with a knife in plain sight on his belt is assumed to have peace in his soul.

In the unlikely event that I were to head for town in a business suit with a knife worn as an appurtenance, the chances are that the first policeman I met would ask some searching questions.

The concealed weapon and I trust the little jack-knife in my pocket doesn't land in this illegal category — is something else again. The law is uncompromisingly stiff, in the matter of concealed weapons.

Legalities apart, I'm inclined to look on sheath-knife carrying less as a threat to law and order than as a by-product of the back-to-nature kick. The knife cased on the haunch is part of a mystique: it's a link with the buckskin past, when Dan'l Boone shot a bar in that tree, and dressed it with his trusty steel.

If violence is on the increase, so is the atavism that has set so many young ones yearning for a basic life in uncluttered country. The belt-knife is part of that romantic picture.

This cult of the knife has produced some superb examples of the cutler's art. I've inspected custom-tailored blades brought north by American sportsmen that cost their proud owners as much as a fine fly rod. Most of these Excaliburs in miniature struck me as less functional than the handy Russell Canadian belt-knife that sometimes goes afield with me. But anyone with an eye for skilled hand-crafting would find them objects of beauty.

Knives as tools are no strangers in my life. I've used them since I was old enough to hack a finger with my first Boy Scout special, and wouldn't feel fully clothed outdoors without a useful blade.

But not necessarily a sheath knife, which is a tool of limited usefulness, and one which the seasoned woods-trotters of my Vancouver Island boyhood held in low regard. They gutted their fish and field-dressed their game with such sturdy Sheffield-forged pocket knives as my father carried. I have that one still, its bone side-plates darkened by sweat and smooth from wear, and its two blades reduced by the whetstone to mere slips of steel.

The sheath knife to them was a piece of fooferaw — the sort of showy nonsense a greenhorn lumbered himself up with. For heavier work than a man's jack-knife would handle, there was always the home butcher knife (four bits at the hardware store) and beyond that, the axe.

Theirs was too sweeping a judgment.

A belt knife is my choice in a boat or on a winter stream, where wet and frequently cold-numbed fingers make hard work of opening a jack-knife.

For the rest, the knife I use most is the twin-bladed, pearl-handled pocket companion that I found years ago in the dust of a country road.

It wouldn't make much of a dint in a bear. But it will unseam a trout or curl a fine shaving off a cedar stick, and more I don't ask of it.

Spectrum Wins Title In Overtime Battle

It may be a brand new school with a brand new name, but some Spectrum players showed Friday night they are old hands when it comes to winning soccer tournaments.

Striker Wayne Reeves scored his third goal with only 10 seconds left in overtime to give Spectrum a thrilling 3-2 win over Reynolds Roadrunners in the Greater Victoria High School Soccer League's playoff final before 1,350 fans at Royal Athletic Park.

Officially, it was the first time Spectrum had won the Colonist Cup. But the road to success is not new to coach Joe Bekkers, manager Joe Kadar and several of the players, including league-champion scorer Dan Hood.

They were all involved with the old Mount View team. And the Mount View boys were playoff champions nine times.

Reynolds, coached by Henry Kuyvenhoven and Tony Fantillo, won the playoff title last year and a week ago collected the Times Trophy for the league championship.

But the Roadrunners got off to a bad start Friday night, playing poorly on the muddy field in heavy rain and were 2-0 down by the interval.

The first goal came after 18 minutes when Reynolds' goalkeeper Gord Reading stopped a header by Hood only to see Reeves kick the ball into the net in an ensuing goalmouth scramble.

Spectrum kept up the pressure and Reeves made it 2-0 when he took a pass from Doug Vincent and beat the goalkeeper with a hard shot to the left corner.

Without the rain in the second half, the Roadrunners came back strongly and, after Spectrum goalkeeper Julius Karpati had made several excellent saves, he was finally beaten after 16 minutes by Greg Booth's hard drive.

Booth, most impressive of the Roadrunners and one of the most experienced players in the league, beat three opponents in a dribbling rush and passed at the last moment for Richard Gurney to score the equalizer at the 34-minute mark.

Roadrunners dominated the overtime period but just couldn't finish their attacks with a goal.

And, with the last seconds ticking away, Spectrum moved upfield, Hood passed to Vincent and the ball was whisked to Reeves, who slammed in the winner.

How Do You Yell 'Sweep' in Russian

The week in review, and for interested curling clubs the film of the air Canada Silver Broom curling championship in Berne, Switzerland, is now available in English, French and German and may be obtained free of charge by contacting local Air Canada sales offices. But that's not the whole story.

When Doug Maxwell, executive director of the world curling championship, was in Moscow in October he showed the film to officials of the U.S.S.R. Sports Committee at a special screening. Maxwell later reported the Russians expressed considerable interest and that curling demonstrations may be arranged at a later date. Oops! There goes the Silver Broom!

Incidentally, majority of curlers are pleased with the new sliding rule, allowing a curler to slide as far as he likes providing he releases the rock before it reaches the hog line. Under the previous ruling it was much like a golfer being told to stop his swing after hitting the ball and not being able to follow through. (So that's the trouble).

Meanwhile, Canadian Football League clubs appear to have become more enlightened than in the past. It was less than two years ago when little Mack Herron, now the scourage of the New England Patriots of the National Football League, was arrested and charged with possession of marijuana and cocaine. The Bombers, without waiting for court action, simply fired their star running back, and all other clubs in the CFL compounded the situation by waiving on him too. It has since been said that Herron wasn't actually blackballed by the CFL, but that CFL general managers didn't pick him up because he had the rep as a clubhouse lawyer and a troublemaker. How convenient?

Then, last month, all-star linebacker Ray Nettles of the B.C. Lions was picked up by police and charged with possession of marijuana. The Lions, wisely, took no immediate action, and Nettles subsequently was cleared of the charge. In Winnipeg it was simply a case of over-reaction by the Bombers, and a denial of the basic principle of justice to Herron. In Vancouver, the Lions' executive kept their cool, and there has been little hue and cry over the issue either. Recently, in the Herron case, there was an article quoting Herron as saying that the marijuana and cocaine seized from his apartment in Winnipeg were not his; it was also revealed, however, that Herron had casually admitted "smoking grass for 12 years."

So the Bombers convicted Herron by their own moral code, and other CFL teams actually honored it. This time the Lions refused to panic and were proven correct. Still, it's reasonably safe to assume the Bombers would dearly love to have their motion rescinded and Herron back as a Bomber back. And if that suggestion goes for the other CFL clubs as well, even most NFL clubs would also be quick to agree. He certainly is an exciting runner, proving that a good small man does have a place in a big man's game.

It may be interesting, too, in light of all the talk of violence in hockey, to learn just what other people think, especially one man much closer to the scene than ordinary Joe Fan, and a recent article in the Ottawa Journal bears repeating, in part.

Tom Brown, the Canadian referee in the recent Russia-Team Canada '74 series — you know, the one who disallowed the Canadian goal in Moscow — was talking to Eddie MacCabe, Journal sports editor, about the new rules the Ontario Hockey Association has instituted. And he does not think that hockey is any less robust because of the stringent regulations.

"I don't think," he said, "you'll ever see juniors play it any other way. They have all that energy and they have something to prove. There's money to be made, and I'd hate to be the guy who costs them anything. I think a referee has to use his head in these things too.

Then he added: "I understand in the minor levels it was getting bad and kids were getting scared to play. But juniors are rough. It's always been that way, and I can't really say I've noticed a lot of difference this year."

The point was also raised that certainly there is room in hockey to have the act cleaned up, but there is also room for common sense, and do-gooders can often do more damage than good by allowing their zeal to get the better of their judgment.

In other words, let the official be the one to assess what is, and what is not, violence. And call it.

Brown also revealed that no Canadian fans really hadn't been too rude to him on his return from Russia where he had disallowed that late, late goal by Bobby Hull, because as far as he was concerned, the game was over.

Which this is. G'nite all.

Sanderson in Debut With Cats Tonight

With his suspension lifted, Gordie Roberts will be back in action tonight for the Victoria Cougars when they tackle Flin Flon Bombers at 8:30 at Memorial Arena.

But his return means that one of the other Cougars will miss the Western Canada Hockey League game. And coach Pat Ginnell has to decide which one.

Ginnell now has 20 players in camp and he can dress only 19 for each game, including the two goalkeepers.

Roberts missed nine games after being suspended Oct. 22 while both the WCHL and the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association negotiated a transfer from his previous club.

Making his debut tonight with the Cougars will be big winger Eric Sanderson, who was obtained this week from New Westminster Bruins.

And the game will mark the first time Ginnell has coached against his former club.

Ginnell was coach and general manager of the Bombers for eight seasons before taking over the Cougars. The clubs have met twice this season in Flin Flon but Ginnell was serving a six-game suspension at the time and had to watch both games from the press box. Cougars won one and the other game was tied.

Cougars, who lead the league's Western Division by seven points, leave on a five-day road trip with games in Calgary, Saskatoon and Regina after tonight's game.

Flin Flon went down 9-5 Friday night to Kamloops Chiefs with Brad Gassoff scoring four goals for the winners on their home ice. Don Moores scored twice and Mark Davidson got two goals for Flin Flon.

And in other league games Friday, Lethbridge Broncos defeated Winnipeg Clubs 5-2 for their fifth straight win, Regina Pats downed Calgary Centennials 6-1 and Edmonton Oil Kings and Saskatoon Blades fought to a 2-2 tie.

Whalers Sail On Win Wave

By The Canadian Press

When New England Whalers started the World Hockey Association season with a 6-2 loss to Toronto Toros, coach Ron Byan predicted correctly that the team wasn't going to look back.

The Whalers haven't lost a game since that Oct. 15 opener in Toronto. They won their seventh straight Friday night when goalie Al Smith posted a 3-0 shutout over San Diego Mariners.

In the only other game, Cleveland Crusaders edged Vancouver Blazers 2-1.

The Whalers lead the Eastern Division race by seven points over Cleveland. And they are tied with Winnipeg Jets for the best won-lost record in the league.

Smith stopped 30 San Diego shots for his first shutout of the season and his sixth win in seven starts.

The Whalers, outshooting the Mariners 37-30, beat San Diego goalie Joe Junkin once in each period.

Terry Caffery and Larry French were the marksmen and Al Karlander added two assists.

Only 4,079 persons showed up for the Whalers match at West Springfield, Mass.

At Vancouver, 6,813 fans saw Cleveland's Grant Erickson break a 1-1 tie with his first goal of the season, at 16:35 of the final period.

The Crusaders had taken the lead midway in the first period when Paul Shmyr beat rookie Vancouver goalie Wayne Wood with a high wrist shot.

Vancouver tied the score when Danny Lawson scored during a scramble in front of Cleveland netminder Gerry Cheevers.

SAN DIEGO (0): NEW ENGLAND (3) — Rick Ley, Terry Caffery, John French. Attendance: 4079.

CLEVELAND (2) — Paul Shmyr, Grant Erickson; VANCOUVER (1) — Danny Lawson. Attendance: 6813.

Boom Boom Sounds Off After Hawks Humbled

By The Canadian Press

"This was real playoff hockey," said elated coach Boom Boom Geoffrion after his Atlanta Flames blanked Chicago Black Hawks 2-0 in the only National Hockey League game Friday night.

"Any time you beat the Black Hawks, that's a real victory," said Geoffrion after his Flames extended their unbeaten streak at home to 11 straight games, eight this season with a 7-0-1 mark.

"Phil was outstanding," Geoffrion said of goalie Phil Myre who stopped 34 Chicago shots for his first shutout of the season.

Ironically, in Myre's last start against St. Louis on Saturday night, the Blues routed the Flames 9-0.

"The St. Louis game wasn't even on my mind," said Myre, who shares goaltending duties with Dan Bouchard. "I just went out there wanting to win. I don't think about the past."

The Flames got the only goal they needed when leading goal scorer Curt Bennett scored his eighth of the season, beating Chicago goalie Tony Esposito after 4:37 of the opening period.

HAD EMPTY NET

Tom Lysiak closed out the scoring with only 28 seconds remaining in the game when he drove his sixth goal of the year into an empty net after Chicago lifted Esposito in favor of a sixth skater.

OILERS TO OPEN NEW COLISEUM

EDMONTON (CP) — Escalators will not be installed and the finishing touches won't be completed, but the $15-million Edmonton Coliseum will be opened for its first attraction this weekend.

Edmonton Oilers of the World Hockey Association, the prime tenants of the 16,000-seat sports, trade and convention centre, will open the Coliseum Sunday night against Cleveland Crusaders. The Coliseum is across the street from the antiquated Edmonton Gardens, a 5,200-seat structure in northeast Edmonton that has been the main sports arena in the city for many years.

Hockey players will have to rough it at first in the Coliseum. Dressing rooms haven't been completed and the players will have to sit on boxes.

All the amenities for fans won't be ready for the first game. Some concession stands won't be finished and the escalators won't be ready until January.

Tough Place to Start

By The Associated Press

Marion Campbell, Atlanta Falcons' defensive co-ordinator since 1969 before taking over as head coach last Tuesday when Norm Van Brocklin was fired, will be taking the heat or the praise Sunday after his first National Football League game at the helm.

It is a tough start for the 15-year-old former Georgia tackle. Atlanta meets the Rams in Los Angeles, where the Falcons have never won a game.

If the Falcons pull off the upset the Rams are 13-point favorites — quarterback Bob Lee will do it on his own. Van Brocklin used to send the orders in from the sidelines. And if Lee falters, Kiln McQuilken may get his chance. The rookie from Lehigh has been getting in more practice time lately and apparently is being considered as the Falcons' No. 2 quarterback; succeeding former Heisman Trophy winner Pat Sullivan from Auburn, who has been used little in his 3½ pro seasons.

In Sunday's other NFL games, Miami is at New Orleans, Houston at Buffalo, Cleveland at New England, Denver at Baltimore, Pittsburgh at Cincinnati, San Diego at Kansas City, Chicago at Green Bay, San Francisco at Dallas, Washington at Philadelphia, Detroit at Oakland and New York Jets at New York Giants.

Minnesota is at St. Louis Monday night.

Miami coach Don Shula lifted the suspensions against running back Mercury Morris who will be ready to play Sunday at New Orleans.

The fleet runner missed six of the eight games this year with neck and knee problems and was suspended Thursday in a tiff over his physical condition.

Probe Follows Brawling at Courtenay

COMOX — Officials of the Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League have called an emergency meeting to discuss Thursday night's fight-filled game between Nanaimo Buccaneers and Mr. Mike's of Courtenay.

Buccaneers, after trailing 2-0 at the end of the first period and forcing a 3-3 tie by the end of two periods, fired in four unanswered goals in the last 20 minutes to win 7-3. But the game was marred by a total of 233 minutes in penalties.

Manager Orv Malcolmson of the Courtenay team said Friday night he had requested an emergency meeting and had notified league president Chuck Cronmiller of his concern over "this disgraceful situation."

Malcolmson said he will also ask the B.C. Amateur Hockey Association to investigate and said he is considering taking his team out of the league.

The Nanaimo players were handed 10 major penalties, three misconducts, 13 minors and a match penalty while Courtenay players were assessed five misconducts, nine majors and 12 minors. A brawl late in the second period caused a 15-minute holdup.

Coach Derrick Duvall of Courtenay said his players had been told earlier this week not to retaliate when a fight erupts and added that he expected some parents will stop their boys from playing because they are worried about injuries.

"If I had been the referee on Thursday, I would have stopped the game," said Duvall.

The coach said parents and fans are not happy with the scene and that the sponsor has indicated he doesn't wish to be associated with this type of hockey.

Duvall said he discussed the situation with RCMP officers Friday and said in future if officials cannot control games police will be called to the arena.

North Island referee instructor Byron Biernes was in charge of the game, assisted by Rick Osmond and John Thibeau.

Payne Points to Weapons

FOR DUEL WITH LIONS

REGINA (CP) — Coach John Payne of Saskatchewan Roughriders concedes that British Columbia Lions have improved, but he's confident of victory Sunday in the sudden-death Western Football Conference semi-final.

After pointing out that doubtful starter Don Moorhead is improved at quarterback and that the Lions' defensive backfield is much stronger than a year ago, Payne said Friday that the Roughriders have three big weapons:

—Taylor Field, where the Lions haven't won since 1965, when Moorhead was a 16-year-old;

—Ron Lancaster, the brilliant field general who always does his best work under playoff pressure;

—Momentum, caused by three victories in a row, two over the Lions, when the Roughriders needed all three to clinch a playoff spot.

"The Lions have improved a lot," said Payne during last-moment preparations for the Sunday game, to be televised nationally by CTV. "But, over-all, we've improved, too."

The Roughriders defeated B.C. in all three of their meetings this season, but two of the three could have gone either way.

The same clubs met in the semi-final last season when the WFC went to sudden-death for the first time, and B.C. took a 33-13 whipping.

Almost overlooked in the pregame speculation is the fact that the Roughriders are healthier than at almost any time this season. All their starters are fit, with the possible exception of defensive tackle Tim Roth.

Payne said Roth's injured ribs are improving rapidly and he's certain to play unless something unforeseen happens.

The two-week layoff since Saskatchewan battered the Eastern Conference champion Montreal Alouettes 17-2 to clinch second spot also has helped the Riders. They're fresher than they've been on the eve of a playoff for many seasons.

If that isn't enough, say Rider supporters, look to Lancaster and fullback George Reed to make the difference.

Both are nearing retirement age. Both have said it's a year-to-year proposition from here on and both have made it known they want to go out as winners.

The survivor of Sunday's contest meets Edmonton Eskimos in Edmonton Nov. 17 for the right to represent the West in the Grey Cup final Nov. 24 at Vancouver.

BANTAM GRID SQUADS In PLAYOFFS SUNDAY

Oak Bay Invaders and Saanich Hornets will both bid Sunday for berths in different B.C. football finals to be played Nov. 17 at Vancouver's Empire Stadium.

Invaders will tackle Renfrew Police Mutual Benefit Association (PMBA) in a B.C. bantam football semi-final at 2:30 p.m. Sunday at Royal Athletic Park. The winner of that game meets the victor of the other semi-final between South Vancouver and Whalley for the provincial title.

Hornets get into action at noon Sunday when they meet Renfrew Firefighters in the B.C. junior bantam semi-finals. The other semi-final is between Williams Lake and Surrey and the final will also be played at Empire Stadium on Nov. 17.

Nanaimo Skip Upsets Block in First Round

Defending-champion Jake Block of Abbotsford was shocked 7-6 by Jack Taylor of Nanaimo Friday in the first round of the $5,400 fifth annual Playland cash bonspiel.

Taylor later made it through to the quarter-finals of the "A" event in the four-day, 32-rink bonspiel by nipping Harvey Thomson of Victoria 10-9 in the second round.

The defeat dropped Block down into the "B" event but he came back for 7-3 win over Glen Harper of Duncan in the second round.

Others through to the "A" event quarter-finals were Jack Trueman and Gary Leibel of Victoria and Gene Kraus of Vancouver.

Trueman edged Ray Benwell of Victoria 9-8 and then got past Chuck Perry of Courtenay 9-3. Leibel beat two Vancouver rivals, Jack Arnet 8-6 and Jerry Still 7-4 and Kraus had to win two close games, shading Steve Skillings of Victoria 9-7 and Lloyd Larson of Victoria 8-7 to make it into the last 16.

Two rinks from both the "A" and "B" events and four from the "C" event qualify for the sudden-death playoff for the $2,500 first prize. The defeated finalist will get $1,200. The third-place rink will receive $500, the fourth-place team gets $400 and the non-winners who make the playoffs earn $200 each.

Moans in the East

OTTAWA (CP) — Hamilton Tiger-Cats and Ottawa Rough Riders, who meet Sunday in the Eastern Football Conference sudden-death semi-final, appear to be doing their best to set up the opposition with their injured lists.

After all, this strategy may pay off with a trip to Montreal the following Sunday for the EFC sudden-death final. The semi-final game starts here at 1:30 p.m. EST.

"Baloney," said Hamilton coach Jerry Williams when told about Ottawa's injuries. "The Rough Riders are not hurting at all. They're just trying to set us up."

"I did the same thing myself in Calgary when I was coaching there."

He said during a Western Football conference game against Edmonton Eskimos, the Stampeders had eight players injured and wound up with defensive back Jerry Keeling at quarterback—where he now plays for Ottawa—and quarterback Peter Liske at slotback.

"We had a game in Winnipeg three days later and here we were with eight guys who couldn't get into the ball game," Williams said. "Well, we really played up those injuries and then went into Winnipeg and whipped them."

THEY CRIED BEFORE

Said Hamilton general manger Ralph Sazio of the Tiger-Cats:

"They cried like that the last time they came in Hamilton and they pinned our ears back so we won't buy that this time."

In four regular-season games between the clubs this year, each team had a 2-2 record, splitting games at home and away.

Injured Ottawa players are end Hugh Oldham, fullbacks Jim Bledsoe and Jim Evenson, all out for the season; centre Bob McKeown and guard Tom Schuette, out for the game.

Hamilton has defensive tackle Fred Grambeau out for the season with a knee injury, slotback Bob Richardson ready to play with an ankle injury, defensive end Richard Bishop sidelined with a knee injury, offensive tackle Bill Danychuk out with a broken leg, and quarterback Bill Etter nursing a knee injury.

Don Jonas is expected to start at quarterback for the Ticats, who have eliminated the Rough Riders in nine of 11 previous playoffs between the clubs. If Etter is unable to play when needed, the Ticats may use Jim Stoechel, who has had little time to get ready. Stoechel was cut in training camp in favor of Etter.

The Hamilton-Ottawa clash will be televised by the CBC national network.

Trotting Triumph

INGLWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Savoir outfought favored Dream Of Glory in the stretch, then held off the closing challenge of longshot Evergreen Song to capture the $109,550 American Trotting Classic at Hollywood Park Friday night.

Savoir, among the 10 richest trotters of all time, covered the 1¼ miles in 2:13 3-5, one-fifth off the record time.

It was only the fourth victory in 17 starts this season for the winner.

Savoir, driven by Jim Dennis, paid $17.20, $9 and $4. Evergreen Song returned $21 and $10.40 and Dream Of Glory, the odds-on choice at 3-5, $2.60.

The victory was worth $49,297.50 and pushed Savoir's total earnings to $688,806.50 for owner Leonard Buck of New York.

Do-it Yourself TIPS

FIXING LOOSE FURNITURE CASTERS—Whwn the casters in furniture work loose, they can be made to fit tightly again by filling the caster hole and reboring it. Select a dowel or whittle a plug that fits tight in the worn hole. Coat the plug well with glue and drive it home, then saw it off flush with the bottom of the leg. When reboring the hole, use a bit which is of slightly less diameter than the caster pin. The latter is coated with soap before it is driven into place.

Sweet Jazz Sounds Die And Sad Tune Returns

By The Associated Press

Jazz coach Scotty Robertson was hearing some sweet sounds near the end, but when the game was finally over it was the same old tune.

With 1:06 left in Friday night's game against Phoenix Suns, New Orleans Jazz had a 102-101 lead. If Robertson's club could hold on, it would be the first win ever for the expansion team after a frustrating string of 10 National Basketball Association losses.

Make that 11.

Keith Erickson sank a pair of free throws to put Phoenix ahead 103-102, then star guard Charlie Scott tossed in a jump shot with 16 seconds to go to clinch the victory.

Elsewhere in the NBA, Detroit Pistons edged Boston Celtics 105-104, Philadelphia '76ers beat Portland Trail Blazers 105-89, and New York Knicks defeated Los Angeles Lakers 117-105.

In American Basketball Association action, the Spirits of St. Louis defeated Denver Nuggets 132-121 and New York Nets edged Memphis Sounds 104-102.

Phoenix' starting backcourt combined for 58 points, with Scott getting 36 and Dick Van Arsdale 22, Pete Maravich topped New Orleans with 29.

Detroit Pistons got 32 points from Dave Bing and 27 points and 20 rebounds from Bob Lanier, but it was the play of reserves John Mengelt and Jim Davis coming off the bench which proved the difference against Boston.

Mengelt scored six points and Davis four in a 14-6 surge in the third quarter, then they added key points in the fourth period as the Pistons held on for their fourth victory in a row.

Steve Mix scored 36 points for Philadelphia. Leroly Ellis turned in a fine defensive effort, holding Blazers rookie star Bill Walton to just two baskets and 10 points.

John Gianelli blocked five shots in the first quarter and Bill Bradley scored 23 points in the first half for the Knicks, who opened a 34-15 lead in the first quarter and never looked back. Bradley, who sank his first 10 shots, finished with 32 points, Walt Frazier added 26 and Earl Monroe 25.

Lakers star Gail Goodrich missed his first 12 shots and finished with but five points, well off his average of 22 Pim. Price led Los angeles with 26 points before the trade was announced that sent him to Milwaukee Bucks in exchange for Lucius Allen, also a guard.

Ali Talks of Rivals For Next Title Bout

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Muhammad Ali says he will defend his world heavyweight boxing title in four or five months against Henry Clark, Ron Lyle, or maybe against George Foreman and Joe Frazier on the same night, the Sacramento Union says.

"I don't want to lie around," the newspaper quoted Ali as saying in a telephone interview from Chicago. "I mean too much to boxing to be out of it too long."

The champion said his first defence may be against Clark, a well-travelled Sacramento boxer who helped him train for his upset knockout of Foreman.

But Ali added: "I'd want at least $3.5 million for the fight."

Ali said he was serious about meeting ex-champions Foreman and Frazier on the same night, 10 rounds apiece.

"A thing like that might have to be held in another country, you understand," Ali said.

Trainer Dies

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP) — John J. Thorpe, 89, a trainer for the Seagram Stable of Waterloo, died in hospital Friday. Born in Toronto in 1885, Thorpe worked for the stable for 63 years. Horses trained by him won the Queen's Plate 10 times and the Durham Cup and Breeder's Stakes three times each.

Vikings Top Grads

University of Victoria Grads take on the Vikings tonight at 8 in another exhibition men's basketball game at the UVic gymnasium and they know that this time they need to collect a few more rebounds.

Vikings out-rebounded the Grads 54-24 Friday night and earned an 84-79 victory.

VIKINGS (84) — Doug Mosher 2, Leon Mitchell 6, Robbie Parris 3, Dale MacDonald 12, Jim Duddridge 16, Evan Jones 4, Pard Hogweide 6, Dave Speed 8, Dave Mulcahy 6, Lorne Dakin 6, Lee Edmondson 15.

VIKING GRADS (79) — Corky Jossul 15, Brian Craig 16, John Lauvaas 7, Gord Hoshal 20, Tom Hatcher 12, Harry Hunter 2, Chris Hall 7.

Top rebounder for the Vikings was Jim Duddridge, who had 15 and scored 16 points while Lee Edmondson picked off 10 rebounds and scored 15 points.

Leading Grad scorer was Gord Hoshal with 20 points and Brian Craig was next with 16.

Vikettes sadly missed the services of Marg Mainwaring and Edna Ritchie, both over on the Mainland attending provincial trials for the Canada Winter Games, and were beaten 54-48 by the Grads in a women's exhibition game.

And in an exhibition junior men's game, UVic Jayvees downed Capilano College 71-47.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Two young men involved in what provincial court Judge Edmond St. Jorre called a "disgraceful performance" were found guilty Friday of assaulting and obstructing a Colwood RCMP constable.

Terrance William Lee, 18, address not known, and Daniel Nicholas Makow, 20, 4075 Metchosin, were sentenced to concurrent three-month jail terms.

The trial was the third of six to be held as a result of charges laid following a fracas July 27 at the Dunsmuir high school ball park on Metchosin Road.

Evidence at the trial was that Lee had been slapping Constable William Biden's holster while the officer was involved in a pushing incident with about eight persons.

Lee said he had slapped the holster because Biden hit him on the chin.

Biden told the court he believed Makow had been to the right of him as a group of persons pushed him.

The constable had entered the ball park after seeing alcohol being consumed.

After calling the incident a disgraceful performance, St. Jorre said, "there's far too much of it going on."

He also said, "this has got to be viewed gravely or we'll have a complete breakdown of law and order throughout the country."

Having a pair of licence plates that were not his own ultimately resulted in a 22-year-old man being fined $525 for three driving offences as well as being put on six months' probation for possessing stolen property.

Robert Lorne Nichol, 22, of 101 Island Highway, was driving on Admirals Road Oct. 23 when checked by police, who had been told the plates on his car were stolen.

Prosecutor Gordon Macdonald said Nichol told police he had been given the plates by a friend who had wrecked his car.

But he also said Nichol had a suspicion the plates were stolen.

While questioning Nichol about the plates police learned he did not have a driver's certificate, a driver's licence or insurance.

Ostler said the case was "another example of a young man who can't afford to drive a car breaking the law in order to do it."

A $100 fine was given a 23-year-old who kicked a man who had grabbed the wife of a friend as she walked down a street.

Allan Gere Hollinger, of 1054 Grange, pleaded guilty to assault causing bodily harm.

Macdonald told the court police Oct. 5 saw Hollinger kick the man, who was lying on the ground, six times.

His face was covered in blood.

Defence counsel Rodney Smith pointed out that the man Hollinger kicked had assaulted Hollinger's friend's wife.

Ostler told Hollinger, "certainly there are cases when a man must act like a man and defend a woman," but he added, "with respect to kicking you were very wrong."

Ostler also noted that Hollinger has also spent a week in custody on the matter and had probably suffered enough.

A suspended sentence and six months' probation was given to Roderick Roland Aho, 18, of Prince George, for shoplifting two pairs of underwear Thursday from Woodward's.

Preliminary hearing was set for Nov. 28 for Danny Benford, 22, of 908 Arcadia and Richard Brown, 22, of 313 Montreal, charged Tuesday with trafficking in marijuana Oct. 20.

They elected trial by judge and jury.

Ronald Harry Lacroix, 19, of 885 Dunsmuir, was fined $75 for possessing marijuana.

Gregory John Tait, 31, of 3978 Oakwood, was fined $350 and banned from driving for 30 days for impaired driving.

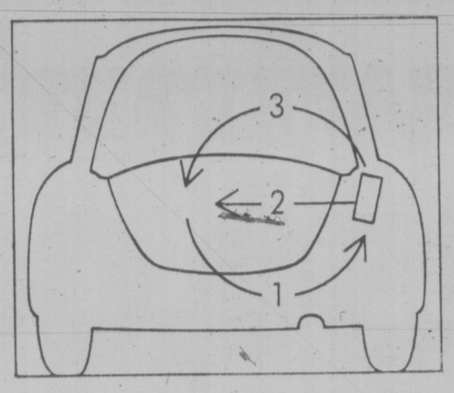
NOW THAT YOU CAN AFFORD FUEL INJECTION:

Here's how it works.



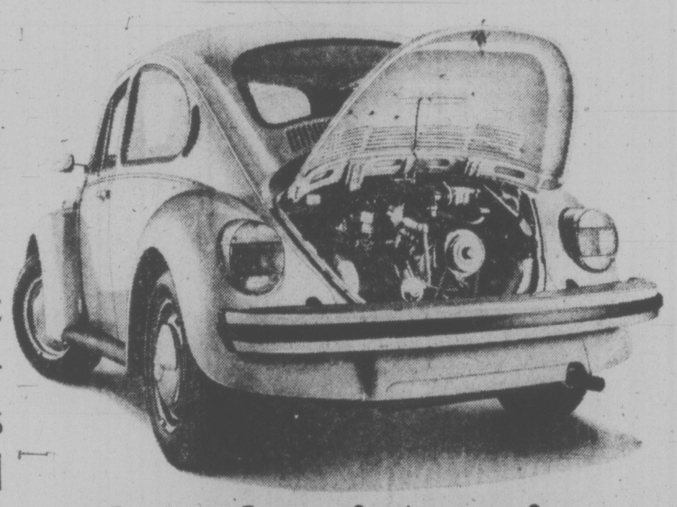
Like most people, you're probably familiar with the term "fuel injection", but probably unfamiliar with just what it is that "fuel injection" actually does.

Which is understandable considering that for the most part, fuel injection has been a luxury item on cars like Porsches and Mercedes that can cost anywhere up to 20 or 30 thousand dollars.

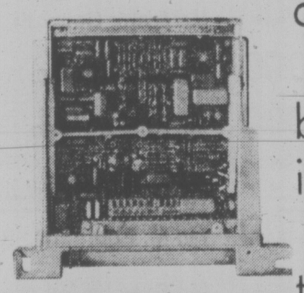
Well, from now on it's going to be standard equipment on the 1975 Volkswagen Beetle.

Simply, here's how this remarkable system works and why it will make the amazing Beetle, even more amazing:

The second you turn the key on, a sealed and transistorized electronic brain (the little box in the diagram) begins receiving information from sensors located in the engine. It digests and evaluates this information in a microsecond and sends a signal back, equally quickly, to the fuel injectors. (There's one for each cylinder.)



The package it comes in.



The brains behind it all.

This signal tells them exactly how much fuel should be injected for each cylinder. (As well, the Beetle's system includes a fifth, independent injector for cold starts.)

From then on, for as long as the car is running, this split-second exchange of information continues.

So the car only uses precisely the amount of gas that it needs (and regular gas, at that) without ever wasting a drop. The engine also runs more smoothly, more efficiently and more trouble-free.

Plus the whole system is tamper-proof and perfectly pre-set.

Finally, the entire package, Beetle and electronic fuel injection, is covered by the VW Owner's Security Blanket, probably the most advanced car coverage plan in the world.

Quite incredible isn't it? The thinking man's car, now thinks.

The 1975 Beetle.

Three newcomers and a veteran join the race for seats in Esquimalt in a campaign highlighted by the issue of public input into planning matters and a sense of community . . .

PEDEN

Of a Greater Tax Base . . . Gorge Clean-Up

More public input in planning is the major issue in low-key election campaigns by five aldermanic hopefuls in Esquimalt.

Several candidates feel an advisory planning commission is a necessary addition to council's structure so residents' views on development can be represented.

Only one incumbent, Ald. Jim McEvay will fight to keep his seat. Ald. Ed. Decosta is retiring after 16 years on council and incumbent Ald. Terry Prentice will not run for re-election.

Contesting the election are three political newcomers and veteran alderman Art Mebs, whose attempt last year to keep his seat after eight years on council failed.

Candidates and their views are:

— Albert Bowbyes, 54-year-old storekeeper for Canadian Liquid Air feels Esquimalt residents, "want to maintain the status quo. We're not ready for any merger: We want to keep Esquimalt as it is."

A resident of the municipality for 20 years he promises honest government. "I'm not trying to gain anything politically by running."

He feels taxpayers "simply want their dollars' worth of services" and the tax base should be broadened to include apartment renters. "They just have got to pay. They tax all systems from the police to the sewers.

"I'm quite keen on renters," says Bowbyes who lives at 1052 Craigflower, "but they have to pay."

Bowbyes advocates greater use of the referendum for major council decisions on "big things that affect taxpayers' dollars."

— Lawrence Mann, another newcomer, is a management engineer who decided to run because of a "gradual loss of the sense of community and quality of life in Esquimalt."

Of particular concern is "wide-scale planning for the future." An advisory planning commission is one of his suggestions to preserve our waterfront and provide public access for all residents.

A one-tiime unsuccessful candidate in Oak Bay, Mann has lead recent protests against high-rise proposals in the Selkirk area.

"I know we need more housing, but we must investigate alternatives. If we increase the residential density in any area," he says, "we must at the same time provide open space . . . and ensure we are not creating traffic problems."

Mann is a resident of 1019 Arcadia and works for the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service. He wants public meetings scheduled before any area is declared a development area.

— James McEvay, who has served one term on council, feels there are no major issues and residents are "pretty happy with the way things are going."

The owner and manager of Nu-Way Cleaners who lives at 401 Treebank, McEvay would also like to see an advisory planning commission established.

He says "during the last two years I've done my best to make sure people have been heard and in face of any outcry about some proposed development we didn't go ahead with it."

His greatest feeling of accomplishment on council is Esquimalt's new recreation centre.

— Art Mebs will push for regionalization of library services "which doesn't seem to be getting very far."

The former chairman of the Greater Victoria Library board while on Esquimalt council, Mebs also wants to see "rehabilitation of the Gorge Waterways."

"It needs somebody to give it a ruddy push to get the thing on the rails," says Mebs, 55, of 451 Lampson. Included in his proposal would be general cleanup and dredging and erection of more rock walls."

Another oversight of council, he says, is a general beautification program, for the business section of the municipality, "which has gone dead".

He too supports a planning commission or advisory committee "so more people at large can get involved in how Esquimalt will be developed."

— Robert L. Peden, 28 year old real estate market consultant with Pacific Strata Ltd., wants neighborhood planning. He feels there's "too much land speculation."

He's try to develop some way "for people to get involved in caring for their neighborhoods and after consultation with council each separate neighborhood could give input for an overall plan."

A resident of Esquimalt for eight years, Peden feels professional planners can be called in after the people have had a chance to discuss their desires.

Peden would like to "take another look at recreation programs in the municipality."

Council, he says, has done an adequate job, but has got to change to deal with the future.

Rights Issue 'A Timebomb'

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

The human rights issue is a timebomb and Canada's news media has done little if anything to help stop it from exploding.

Walter Tarnopolski, professor of constitutional law and civil liberties at Toronto's Osgoode Hall Law School, said in an interview this week interracial and interethnic relations in Canada have grown "steadily more intense."

The need for an awareness of basic human rights was never greater than it is now, he declared.

"We are sitting on a timebomb."

He said the media has failed to bring the issue to the fore.

"Advances made in human rights education and enforcement has not been considered newsworthy enough," he said. "The work being done just hasn't been given the publicity it should."

Tarnopolski, a keynote speaker at the first conference of human rights ministers from across Canada which opened here Thursday and ends today, aimed his bitterest comments at the CBC.

"The CBC has failed in its duty placed under the Broadcast Act to develop a Canadianism which hasn't ended up homogenizing our many cultures.

"Most popular producers and announcers in the CBC don't believe in multiculturalism, ridicule it, and ignore any opinion opposed to their viewpoint."

The television network "runs silly programs like Up Canada without any understanding of the sensitivities of other people," he said.

Other radio and television networks were equally guilty, he said, but CBC "was the leader."

He felt CBC was remiss in its opposition to broadcasting in other languages besides French and English.

By comparison, he noted, the Yugoslavian national system broadcasts in six languages, the Indian, 14.

He said the press too had failed to take "a very active or enlightened approach" on the human rights issue.

"Some newspapers have been opposed to human rights administration because they don't recognize old traditional rights have to give way, in a different age, to certain collective rights."

An example, he said, was a person's right to decide what he may do with his property.

He cited cases of covenants being put on property to prevent sale to people of different racial or ethnic backgrounds.

"But the covenants themselves are not as severe, as racially restrictive or as widespread as incidents of discrimination reported in rental accommodation."

Tarnopolski, who is writing a book Discrimination and the Law in Canada (he hopes to have it published late next year), said minority groups are becoming more visible and militant.

"They are going to create tension . . . and the way to resolve the problem is by a thorough understanding of human rights."

He suggested that could be achieved through education and enforcement.

"The only reason we seem to be better off than the U.S. or U.K. is because we have had more restrictive immigration policies in the past."

But, he noted, far greater efforts are being made in the U.S. than Canada to raise the level of equal opportunity for disadvantaged minorities.

"We are faced with one of two choices. Either we openly discriminate . . . or we face up to the fact immigration in the future will bring a very large non-white component into the nation."

He said Canadian immigration policies were not in themselves discriminatory but the current debate in Parliament on the matter was giving "cause for concern."

"There is talk of new restrictions in terms of holding back the flood from the Third World. That kind of thinking is wrong and we shouldn't allow it.

"If there are to be restrictions they should be non-racial ones."

He said he was concerned also about the concept of multiculturalism in Canada.

"Too many governments think multiculturalism means folk dancing, folk art, and collecting colored eggs at Easter. That's a mistake. What it means is to emphasize the quality of people regardless of race, sex, creed or anything. What it means is power-sharing."

He felt the federal government could and should lead the way.

He said French-speaking people, who comprise 27 per cent of the population, are still "under-represented" in government, making up only 21 per cent of the federal civil service and filling for the most part "low level jobs."

"But that's nothing compared to other minority groups who have hardly any representation in government yet who make up 28 per cent of the population."

He said white-Anglo-Saxon Protestants predominated "in government, in judicial appointments, in the media generally."

'20 GOOD KIDS FOR EVERY BAD'

ROBBINS

For every young person who has a brush with the law, there are 20 good kids, says John Robbins.

He should know.

Robbins, 36, who joined the Regional Crown Counsel office last month, taught school before he decided on a legal career.

Entering the teaching profession in 1962 in New Brunswick, he was head of the physical education department at a high school in Trenton, Ont., in 1965, the year he chose to enter law school. He studied at the University of New Brunswick and was called to the bar in Alberta in 1969.

"I was looking for something that was a bit more challenging," he said, but he quickly added that his former profession would be more of a challenge now because of "the way kids are today."

Asked how being a teacher affected the way he views young persons, Robbins said, a "teaching background made me realize if you see a few bad ones, they're not all bad."

He did not think any more youths today took drugs than people of his generation bought beer.

Robbins, who owned a large general law practice in High River, Alta., said he decided to switch from being a defence lawyer to a prosecutor because he wanted to try "the other side of the coin for a change," and was attracted here by the climate.

Hank's Widow Cashes In

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)— The widow of country music star Hank Williams is selling some of the singer's possessions at a garage sale featuring $10,000 diamond rings and $4 souvenir t-shirts.

"I was married to a legend," said Mrs. Audrey Williams Friday as she sat before a life-size cardboard likeness of her husband. Williams died in the back seat of his white Cadillac as he was being driven to a singing engagement in West Virginia on Jan. 1, 1953.

She said she preferred a secluded life, but "I'm letting people come in now because I feel I owe that to Hank Sr. She said she is besieged with telephone calls and visitors during the day and night.

"He's lived through Elvis Presley, through the Beetles and every year the royalties are bigger."

Inside the house, dozens of pieces of oriental furniture, Tiffany lampshades, cut crystal, rings, old records and rusty branding irons were laid out for sale.

For those who couldn't afford the higher-priced items, there were tiny silver hearts at $4 each, t-shirts and pictures of the man who rocketed to country music fame by writing Your Cheatin' Heart, Jambalaya, Hey, Good Looking and "I'm So Lonesome I Could Cry."

Also on sale were photographs of the grave where Williams was buried in Montgomery, Ala.

As the two-day sale opened Friday, there were few visitors prowling through the merchandise, perhaps because of the $2 admission fee.

"I'm charging $2 because there are people who want to come in just because it was Hank Williams' home," she explained. She said the admission is returned if a purchase is made.

PESTA

CAPTAIN STICKY'S ON THE PROWL . . .

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Richard Pesta has stuffed his 350 pounds into a blue jump suit and wrapped it all up in a gold cape. He says the first step toward fighting evil business practices is to call attention to himself.

Sporting a golden S on his chest, a beard on his chin, and gold shoes on his feet, Pesta goes from local television show to local radio program to supermarket openings calling himself Captain Sticky.

Two current targets of his speeches are advertising techniques that make consumers feel inadequate, and old age homes that he says abuse their patients.

Pesta's girth and outlandish regalia aren't his only weapons, however. In one recent conversation with a reporter, Pesta was flanked by his lawyer and his own marketing expert.

I Won't Be a Swinger, Charles Tells Editors

LONDON — Prince Charles says he has no intention of growing longish hair, or trying to woo popularity by dropping into the Playboy Club. The Royal Family has a part to play in upholding human values and standards, he adds.

"Images are dangerous things to cultivate because most people can see through any artificial character," the prince told a Society of Magazine Editors meeting Friday.

LONDON — Police are seeking a peer of the realm, Lord Lucan, after his estranged wife was savagely beaten and their children's nanny was found battered to death in the basement of his wife's elegant townhouse.

The body of the 29-year-old nanny was found in a large canvas bag in the cellar of the four-storey home.

Lord Lucan, 39, lived apart from his wife.

Lady Lucan ran from her house Thursday night and staggered into a nearby pub screaming: "Murder, murder, murder," witnesses said.

LORD LUCAN

SAN FRANCISCO — Two years ago, Edmund Van Deusen, a grandfather, found himself divorced and lonely at the age of 50, but unwilling to marry again. So he hired a "wife."

Elaine Peterson, 35, answered Van Deusen's newspaper ad asking for a woman to live with him for $500 a month. The couple is still together. And Van Deusen says both of them "feel very good about each other."

Ms. Peterson agreed enthusiastically, "It's really sexy."

Before setting out on their unconventional conjugal life, Van Deusen and Ms. Peterson signed documents spelling out the duties of both parties: for Van Deusen, the compensation and all other requirements of an employer; for Ms. Peterson, the requirements of the bedroom and the kitchen, in that order.

The document also outlines Ms. Peterson's "duty hours," "day off," and "vacation" time.

PRINCE ALBERT — John Diefenbaker Friday confirmed he will sign a contract with a Toronto publisher Monday for his memoirs. He expects there will be three volumes when the memoirs are finished.

"Now the work really starts" Diefenbaker said. He will go to Barbados next month to spend about three weeks working on the book, he added.

WESTBURY, N.Y. — Connie Francis, whose recordings in the 1950s sold in the millions, was raped in her hotel room Friday by an intruder who fled with her mink coat, and jewellery. Police could find no evidence that anyone had broken into the room. After the assault, Miss Francis called her secretary who was staying in the next room. The secretary reported the incident to police.

HIRED WIFE

Bernadette Asks 'Time to Think'

WINNIPEG (CP) — British troops must be pulled out of Northern Ireland to give the people time to think things out, Bernadette Devlin, a social activist from that country, said Friday.

"We would love to take the guns out of this struggle. But let the British take their 16,000 guns out first," said the former member of the British Parliament to about 500 people at the University of Manitoba.

"Britain is the Irish problem. The only thing the British can do is to get the hell out."

Miss Devlin accused the owners of big business of fostering the religious differences between members of the working class in order to keep them from uniting.

She said she has been trying to establish communication between Roman Catholics and Protestants, but added that so far the links are "small and tenuous."

A member of the university audience, referring to Miss Devlin's support of the Irish Republican Army, which has been engaging in terrorist activities against the British troops, asked if she didn't think it wrong to kill people, regardless of the cause.

"You will be counting graves until you die, and you will regret it," he said.

"We have been counting graves for more than 800 years," Miss Devlin replied.

"And, unless we get the British out, we will continue counting graves."

MICHENER JOGS ON

TORONTO (CP) — Roland Michener says he still jogs about a mile a day.

Michener, 74, who retired as governor-general last January and lives in Toronto, told the 75th anniversary meeting of the Insurance Institute of Canada that he doesn't think he ever will be able to stop jogging.

He said that wives encouraged their husbands to start jogging when it first became known he was a jogger.

Rural Voters Not Left Out

Rural residents who were not enumerated but are qualified to vote will be allowed to cast a ballot in the upcoming regional and school board elections.

Legislation introduced in the house this week will allow people who were not enumerated to vote, provided they complete an application for registration with the returning officer on election day.

Enumeration for municipal and school board elections was started for the first time this year but outlying areas in regional districts either did not or could not enumerate voters.

The $4 Quickie 'Divorce'

ST. PAUL, Minn. (UPI) — They call it a "$4 divorce" and no doubt there are some advantages, as long as you're not married.

The partners split the fee. There is no alimony and no one stands to lose more than $500.

But then it's not actually a divorce because the two persons parting ways were never married — only living together.

And the settlement involves only property rights.

St. Paul municipal judges say the new social phenomenon of young people living together is finding its way into the courts.

For the star-crossed lover who wants out with what he thinks is his or her property, the only recourse is in conciliation court — sometimes known as small claims court.

"There is no other legal forum for these people," said Judge Joseph Summers, who coined the term "$4 divorce."

"A few years ago this was unheard of, but now we get two or three cases a week," another judge said.

The pattern is common. Two young lovers decide to live together. They rent an apartment, buy furniture together and have other financial dealings.

"In this type of relationship, property rights are created," Summers said, "and if the lovers quarrel there often is a problem over dividing the property.

Take the young man who moved out of his girl friend's apartment in a huff. He returned later to claim his queen-size bed.

The girl refused to give up the bed and presented him with a bill for money she had loaned him for car payments, rent and spending money.

The matter wound up in conciliation court, where each had to pay $2 to have a judge hear the case.

Sugar Rise, Poor Crops Linked

LONDON (AP) — Russian crop failures account in part for the sharp rise in the price of sugar, international sugar experts say.

"The spark that triggered off the recent rise in sugar prices was three consecutive sugar beet crop failures in the Soviet Union," said a senior United Nations sugar expert.

The expert, who refused to be quoted by name, said in an interview that because of the bad harvests beginning in the fall of 1971, the Russians stopped selling sugar on world markets and began buying instead.

As a result, he continued, worldwide demand 81 million tons this year exceeded supply 80 million tons and prices began to skyrocket. In 1971, for example, the price of a pound of raw sugar landed in New York was 4.52 cents. Today it is 67.2 cents.

Increased costs of refining, distributing and marketing sugar also have contributed to the price spiral. Experts also cite the following factors:

—Bad weather diminishing the sugar yield of beet crops throughout Europe.

—The increase in world population and the ban on cyclamates has increased the demand two to four per cent a year, while sugar stocks have been declining.

But United Nations statistics underline the importance of the Soviet beet failure in the sugar supply squeeze. In 1971, the Soviets sold one-million tons of sugar on the world market. But in 1973 they purchased 2.6-million tons.

The net effect of the Russian switch from seller to buyer was to take 3.6 million tons of sugar away from the rest of the world market, supplies which otherwise would have been available for sale in the West.

Russia to Build Huge Icebreaker

OTTAWA (CP) — Within a few months the U.S.S.R. will begin construction of the world's most powerful icebreaker, the 75,000 h.p., nuclear-powered, Artica.

It will literally dwarf the Lenin which, at 44,000 h.p., is presently the world's largest icebreaker.

The Soviet interest in icebreakers is easily explained by Dr. Alexey Treshinkov, director of the Arctic Institute, located in Leningrad.

The simple facts are that huge icebreakers are needed to keep shipping lanes open along the thousands of miles of Arctic ocean to the north of the U.S.S.R.

And Soviet authorities decided more than 40 years ago that Arctic shipping was essential to the U.S.S.R., Dr. Treshinkov told five Canadian journalists in a recent interview.

There is great resource wealth in the northern reaches of the Soviet Union, he said, and it was decided the water route was the only feasible way to bring them out. The trans-Siberian railroad was too far to the south.

At first, in the early 1930s, it seemed an almost impossible task to navigate the frequently icebound Arctic ocean, but in 1932 a special task force was appointed to study conditions and to prepare for regular navigation.

Ashcroft Fire Ruins Yield Two Bodies

ASHCROFT (CP) — Two bodies were recovered Friday from the ruins of a hotel fire and RCMP believed there might be another victim.

Rescue teams and firefighters found the body of a 45-year-old Ashcroft man Friday morning and the body of a woman Friday night.

The hotel, built in this community 140 miles north of Vancouver in 1916, was destroyed in less than two hours despite efforts by nearly 30 volunteer firefighters. Cause of the fire was not known.

The search was to continue today for another person believed caught in the fire.

Hotel guests, many of them wearing only pyjamas, were forced to flee when fire broke out at about 4:45 a.m.

Cache Creek fire chief Don Sehr said the blaze cut off the power used to supply water for firefighting and firemen were unable to get water from the nearby river because it was too far from the hotel.

The blaze melted a span carrying all British Columbia Telephone Co. trunklines into the community. More than 1,000 phones were out of service Friday.

6 of 7 Set To Sign Press Pact

VANCOUVER (CP) — A spokesman for six of seven unions representing Pacific Press Ltd. employees said Friday the six will sign contracts with the company which produces the Province and the Vancouver Sun.

But a spokesman for the International Typographical Union, which has rejected a proposed pact, refused comment on that union's next move.

Following an emergency meeting of the Joint Council of the Unions, spokesman Dave McIntyre said the six unions that have ratified the agreement will sign it once the documents have been drawn up.

The contract with the company is retroactive to Nov. 1 and includes a 17-per-cent wage increase on a key classification wage of $272 a week.

African 'Eden' Theory Challenged by Yugoslav

BELGRADE (UPI) — For 15 years paleontologist Mirko Malez has asserted that the caves in the Karst areas of Northern Yugoslavia housed aboriginal man — thus challenging the theory that the species originated in Africa.

But the evidence he needed was lacking until a group of convicts working in a quarry near the Northern Yugoslav port of Pula came upon traces of beings that Malez believes are the Euorpean link between the ape and primitive man.

"Some of the tools found in this region are among the oldest known artifacts in Europe," said Malez, of Yugoslavia's paleontology institute and director of the Yugoslav academy of art and science.

Tools and preserved human fossils found in Sandalj cave were proof that simultaneous with the existence of early African culture an advanced creature lived in Yugoslavia's Istrian peninsula, he said.

If, as Malez sustains, the artifacts could be close to 2 million years old, the widely-held theory that man originated in southern Africa and spread out from there will have to be discarded.

But preliminary analysis in laboratories in Yugoslavia, Holland and Great Britain, have managed only to determine that the artifacts are between 600,000 and 1,800,000 years old.

The museum of Natural History in London is currently working to determine more accurately the age of Istrian aboriginal man.

Asked how it was possible to have a time gap of more than 1 million years in the preliminary age estimates, Malez said: "Radio carbonic analysis enables us to determine the age of an artifact up to about 60,000 years old.

"If it is older we must take into consideration the corelated fauna and make a comparative analysis with fauna related to the animal life from the medium to the Upper Villa — Franca periods — from 800,000 to 1,800,000 years ago. This is what the British experts are now doing."

It has already been established that there was abundant animal life in the Yugoslav Dinaric Alps during the Villa Afranca period (between the Oligocene and Pleistocene age).

Skeletons have been found of the southern elephant, the small rhinoceros, deer and bears all relating to this period which first prompted Malez to speculate that it might also have spawned aboriginal man.

The recent excavations have also turned up several well-preserved skeletons of early hunters.

Whether or not they turn out to be the descendants of a European type of aboriginal man, they provide gruesome testimony of the toughness of man's early fight for survival.

An onslaught of cold forced these men and animals to enter one of the region's many caves to find shelter. Using stone axes and primitive spears the men defeated the animals.

But when there was no more meat and a glacier had closed the cave entrance, the men turned on one another. The dispersed parts of human skeletons, human skuls pierced by stone axes, and broken legs testify to perhaps the first case of cannibalism.

Mail Goes by Road

OTTAWA (CP) — The post office will use road transportation whenever necessary to move second-and-third-class mail and parcels to avoid delays caused by wildcat railway strikes, a postal spokesman said Friday. There have been wildcat strikes this week by railway workers in Montreal and Ottawa, and some employees have been off in Toronto. First-class mail, which moves by air, has not been affected.

A Rich Trove Awaits Explorers of Old Art

SALISBURY (CP) — Undiscovered art treasures await the intrepid visitor to Rhodesia.

They are the rock paintings of people who inhabited Rhodesia before the coming of the Bantu and the Europeans.

Already about 1,000 paintings have been recorded and experts say this is just a portion of the number that must exist. All are protected by law as part of the country's heritage.

Quite regularly hikers, campers, hunters and fishermen find new examples of the art work, some of it as old as 2,000 to 3,000 years.

The paintings are usually found under overhanging rocks or in caves chosen by the artists as protection against the weather. Most are painted on granite or quartzite.

Subjects depicted by the artists cover all aspects of their life. Most predominant are hunting and animal scenes.

The animals are lifelife and drawn with confidence. Some of the animals depicted have not lived in the area in living memory, enabling naturalists to establish the distribution of the country's wildlife in an era now almost forgotten.

Tribal life is offen depicted, ranging from dancing, and domestic activities to the return from a successful hunt.

Rainmaking and burial ceremonies are also shown. Indications of the supernatural are usually shown by the merger of human and animal. This often results in strange creations such as crocodile men and bat men.

There are three stages in the rock paintings. Experts see a development from early beginnings to a classic period and then a degeneration.

The earliest paintings are 2,000 to 3,000 years old, reaching a peak in Matabeleland in the mid-16th to 17th centuries and in Mashonaland in the mid-17th century.

After that the art quality drops off until it disappears with the Zulu invasions in the 19th century. The Africans now living in Rhodesia have no connection with the artists.

Paintings scattered over a wide area have been executed by the same artists. It is thought that they made their living travelling the country to carry out "commissions".

Fine examples of the rock paintings can be found close to Salisbury. At Bushman's Point on Lake McIlwaine there are fine paintings of animals and fish.

At Domboshawa, a short drive out of the city, paintings depict rainmaking ceremonies.

At one site in Mashonaland is a painting of a female figure in a manner common to primitive cultures throughout the world.

The woman is fat and probably pregnant and has streams or hands coming from the lower part of the body. This has strong resemblance to the ideas of the earth mother or goddess of fertility found in early Mediterranean societies.

One of the paintings that has puzzled archeologists is found in a cave in the southwest. It stretches for half the length of the cave and is a fabulous monster of primitive imagination, a snake with awesome teeth, ears and a curly tail. From its nostrils appears a faint suggestion of smoke.

Unlike many rock paintings it is extremely colorful. The head and tail are in red, the body a faded white and the underside yellow, outlined in purple.

Strangest of the monster's features are 24 undulations along its back. On these are depicted 14 human figures, seven baboons, three buck and a baboon with the head of a buck.

Rhodesia's rock paintings are usually attributed to a race of bushmen who did not survive the vast migrations of tribes in Central and Southern Africa from the 17th century to the coming of the European.

New Clash Expected Over Textbooks

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP) — Education officials and textbook opponents here appear headed for a new confrontation in the wake of a school board decision reinstating controversial texts for student use.

At issue are textbooks the protesters consider un-American, immoral and sacriligious.

As the Kanawha County board of education decided Friday to return all but two series of the controversial books to the classroom, angry anti-textbook leaders were urging parents to close the Kanawha County school system.

Kenneth Underwood, county schools superintendent, praised the board's vote, saying it "took into consideration the entire county.

"At no time can a system be governed by the decisions of a small segment of the community," he said.

The texts to be returned to the classroom include excerpts of works by Allen Ginsburg, James Baldwin and Eldridge Cleaver.

The school board had ordered the books stored at the height of the protest pending board action on recommendations made by a textbook review committee.

"We're calling for a complete boycott and shutdown of the school system, beginning Tuesday," said Rev. Marvin Horan, one of a handful of fundamentalist preachers who have led the nine-week anti-textbook movement.

"I'm certainly not satisfied," said Mrs. Alice Moore, the board member who launched the protest earlier this year. "Parents may now be forced to educate their children in their own home."

PM's Name Forged

STAFFORD, England (Reuter) — Ronald Milhench, 37, an insurance broker who admitted forging Prime Minister Harold Wilson's signature in an attempt to extract $57,500 from a British newspaper, was jailed Friday for three years. Milhench forged Wilson's signature on a letter purporting to show the prime minister's approval of a land speculation deal and attempted to sell it to the paper.

An Old Warrior Puts Up Sword

NEW CHIEF of staff for the Canadian Forces Pacific is Lt.-Col. Donald Ross, who takes over from Major Charles Goodman, left, who is retiring after 33 years' service. Ross, who is Rear-Admiral R. J. Pickford's senior adviser on regional military operations, was formerly on the staff of the Combat Arms School at CFB Gagetown, N.B.

CHOUMAN VALLEY, Iraq (AP) — For 40 years, Mullah Mustafa Barzani has been fighting for Kurdish autonomy.

Now, at age 70, the grey-haired warrior is in the midst of the bloodiest battles of his career. Partly because of rising oil prices, the stakes are higher than ever and at a time when most men are happily retired, Barzani's enthusiasm for rebellion is stronger than ever.

Barzani claims to be the leader of an estimated two million Kurds who populate nearly a quarter of Northern Iraq. He says he doesn't want an independent country. He will settle for his own state within a state in northern Iraq. But it must be on his terms. His role as the only Kurdish leader and spokesman is disputed.

At a secret headquarters in this fertile green valley on the Iranian border, Barzani talked about his struggle.

"I think the world knows about us, our situation as a people and the injustice done to our people," he said between puffs on a pipe.

It was nearly midnight and Barzani sat in a simple aluminum and plastic garden chair in a room lit by two butterfly gas lamps.

Blackout curtains covered the windows. To read a document, he pulled a pair of wire-rimmed spectacles from his shirt pocket. In the belt of his baggy Pesh Merga (Kurdish army uniform) was a dagger, symbol of his life's work.

"My role has been forced upon me," he said, speaking in a deep voice. "But I will serve my people, as long as I am able."

Barzani's fight began in 1931 when the independent Kurdish state set up in the Lausanne Agreement after the First World War remained unrecognized. A Barzani-led rebellion simmered into and through the Second World War and in 1946 he emerged as the head of a Soviet-supported independent Kurdish state in the Azerbaijan Mountains of north Iran. The movement collapsed after six months and Barzani fled to the Soviet Union with some 500 followers. He remained there in exile until 1958.

A new Iraqi constitution that year recognized the Kurds as partners in determining the country's destiny and he returned home, but a year later, in 1959, Barzani split with the government over how this should be done. In 1961 he began a new battle for a democratic state in Iraq with autonomy for the Kurds.

'... An Emphasis On the Offbeat'

MONTREAL (CP) — Adrian Waller and his backers will be confronted with a $100,000 price tag when they put their magazine Elite on Canadian newsstands in December.

Of those costs the printer's bill alone will reach $35,000. But Mr. Waller, editor of the upcoming magazine for Canadian males, is confident the publication is going to soar into the land of success and will not fold as do so many fledgling Canadian publications.

In a recent interview, Mr. Waller, a spirited man with a long history in journalism and the arts, said the initial run of Elite will total about 250,000. Although the figure seems high, he said five years of research which preceded the magazine's maiden voyage to newsstands showed a circulation of 250,000 not to be unrealistic.

Although primarily aimed at a Canadian market, the magazine will also be distributed in the United States, he said. He is confident Canadian advertisers will support the Playboy-type magazine and said various airlines, cigarette and tobacco companies have shown interest in advertising with Elite.

The first edition, scheduled to appear Dec. 5, will contain 20 full pages of ads. A full-page ad run once will cost $3,500.

"The magazine should show a profit by the second edition," he said, and hesitated to comment on what would happen should the magazine suffer severe economic losses.

"If the first edition does not sell, there definitely will be a second and third edition."

He is confident Elite is exactly what Canadian men are looking for and will provide a badly-needed market for native writers and photographers.

"We aim to depict the lifestyles of 20th century Canadian men, who are sophisticated and fundamental."

The magazine will be aimed at the 20 to 35-year-old age group, with "an emphasis on the offbeat."

The first edition will carry articles on gambling, the swapping of male-female roles, sex shops and film and book reviews. And of course the inevitable photographs of women in various stages of undress.

Put yourself into the Political Process

Add your own thoughtful contribution to broaden and strengthen your political party

Make a tax-creditable gift to a political party and take advantage of the new 1974 Election Expenses Act, which offers important tax advantages to encourage all taxpaying Canadians to buy a piece of the financing of their political parties.

We hope you make your gift to the Liberals. That's why the Liberal Party brings you this message. If you prefer to support another Party, please do. We think you should give money to the political process, period.

A whopping credit on your income tax

If you give this much to a Political Party	$25.00	$40.00	$100.00	$250.00	$500.00
The Government reduces your Federal Income Tax by this amount:	18.75	30.00	75.00	150.00	275.00
So the Gift costs you only:	6.25	10.00	25.00	100.00	225.00

Donors of gifts over $100 will have their gifts published, by the terms of the Election Expenses Act. We believe this custom, common in several democracies, will give added pride to the experience of supporting political parties.

Here is the complete tax credit formula:

a) 75% of a contribution up to $100;
b) $75 plus 50% of a contribution between $101 and $549;
c) $300 plus 33⅓% of the amount by which the donation exceeds $550. The maximum annual tax credit is $500, making $1150 the maximum amount of a donation which can receive the tax credit.

Put yourself into the Political Process

The 1974 Election Expenses Act encourages a broad new base of normal-income donors. These new political contributors will reinforce political parties' responsibility: the people. You will join tens of thousands of new donors to political parties!

Add your own thoughtful contribution to broaden and strengthen your political party

Concerned voters now have added opportunity to commit themselves to parties and policies as donors, volunteers and fund-raisers. The efforts of volunteers and fund-raisers along with a steady flow of gift income, will continue party renewal year-round and between elections.

Energizing provincial and riding organizations, selecting able candidates, involving women, youth and other groups, building trust funds for upcoming election expenses, improving communication between voters and their candidates and members — all these vital tasks require the steady flow of gifts; gifts which the tax-credit gift program encourages.

Why give at all?

Political parties need money to operate. Now more than ever the new Election Expenses Act encourages all Canadians to support their parties.

Ballot boxes are the periodic evidence of our system at work. But in the meantime? Opportunities to affect and improve the party and the system continue. They all require money. Thoughtful gifts help realize these opportunities. Ignoring giving means ignoring opportunities for change.

Why give to the Liberal Party?

We hope your gift will come to us. We need your support, now and for later. Here are some examples of how your dollars may be used.

$100 might pay for: 500 posters for an important by-election or polling 1250 voters on their real concerns.

$40 might pay for: a newsletter to 500 constituents or gas money for a candidate or member to tour the constituency learning voters' views.

$500 might pay for: a duplicating machine or a new manual on constituency organization.

If you are a Liberal supporter, you will help the Party by making a gift this year. If you prefer to support another party, please do. We think you should give money to the political process, period.

How it works

Send us your cheque. We'll acknowledge it (with sincere thanks) and later send you an Official Receipt from our Registered Agent which you should keep until completing your Income Tax Return. In the space indicated on the Return, you will claim the appropriate tax credit and attach your receipt, and your tax due — or your refund — is changed by that amount.

Meanwhile, we will have split your gift between your local Liberal organization and the Liberal Party operation for the Province, for both current operating budgets and trust funds for the next election.

Heller's Weary Saga of a Neurotic Bore. Too Much

It's been a long wait. The year was 1961 and Joseph Heller was just 38 years of age, when his "Catch-22" was first published. It was a book that was to sell eight million copies, to earn its author more than half a million dollars.

It was, moreover, an important book. Heller's was clearly a formidable., refeshing talent. His irreverent account of Yossarian's bombing group was not merely a very funny story, but provided deep insights into the lunacy of war at the beginning of decade in which, particularly among the young, there was the inevitable back-lash against America's armed involvement in the far corners of the world.

Now, 13 years later, the wait is over. Heller's long-delayed encore is a second novel called "Something Happened." It seems sure to be the most controversial book of the 70's, already climbing to the top on the best seller lists. It may earn Heller as much or more in royalties as "Catch-22". The reviews, just as they were for his first novel, are unbelievably mixed. For every critic who has described it as brilliant there's another who has savaged it unmercifully.

By JACK SCOTT

Certainly it must be judged as a powerful novel since any reader with the attention span of a patient lizard who managed it all the way through 560 unrelenting pages will surely find himself locked in a major manic-depressive mood that may demand the instant therapy of a month of lighter reading.

That traumatic effect conceded, it must also be reported that "Something Happened" is a grotesque, tiresome and very often a downright loathsome exercise. It is clearly intended to hold up a curved mirror to the anxieties of life in America, but not even the most rabid anti-American could believe that it is a life as altogether pointless and sick as Heller would have us believe. It is, in fact, a near classic example of literary over-kill.

For reasons that become increasingly unclear as the book progresses, Heller has elected to tell the story of a neurotic, paranoidal, hate-ridden, utterly selfish and self-centered anti-hero — and to tell it in the first-person words of this deranged, impossible man.

At some point along the way, Bob Slocum describes himself as "an able, well-read, fairly intelligent, sensitive, personable, successful minor organization executive." In fact he is a thoroughly contemptible boy-man whose reflections on his job, his family, his immature sex life, his fears and his bewildering array of hang-ups makes an unrelieved document of dementia.

A more or less typical conclusion is his outlook on his family. "In the family in which I lived there are four people of whom I am afraid," he observes about mid-way in this long, weird recitation. "Three of these four people are afraid of me, and each of these three is also afraid of the other two. Only one member of the family is not afraid of any of the others, and that one is an idiot."

Slocum talks endlessly, indeed, about fear, though he seems to be as keen on implanting it as he is to experience it.

Talking of his company (never identified, though Heller has told one interviewer it was based on the organizational structure of Time, Inc.) he broods: "In the office in which I work there are five people of whom I'm afraid. Each of these five people is afraid of four people (excluding overlaps), for a total of twenty, and each of these twenty people is afraid of six people, making a total of 120 people who are feared by at least one person. Each of these 120 people is afraid of the other 119, and all of these 145 people are afraid of the twelve men at the top who helped found and build the company and now own it."

This might seem an apt, even humorous, commentary on the neuroses to be found in almost any corporation, but Slocum is afraid of everythings mice, dreams, the women he seeks for quick sexual joyless affairs to test his masculinity, his drinking wife, his unhappy children (one of them mentally retarded), closed doors and a dirge-like list of the greatest matched set of phobias since Gogol was in vogue.

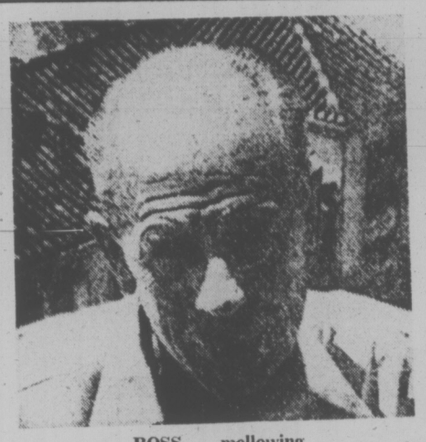
What story there is concerns Slocum's part in the shafting of his superior and a theatrical, unbelievable account of how he brings death to the young son who has brought him nearest to an emotion of love. The rest is the endless, repetitious soul-searching of a demented, humorless (he puts a ha-ha in parentheses when he manages a joke) and totally unbelievable jerk.

It took Heller seven long years to put all this together and there is certainly a painstaking craftsmanship to his work that creates an almost unbearable, tense rhythm that may have an hypnotic effect on the reader. It is only on looking back on the experience that there is an awareness of how one-dimensional this work really is, that without pity or sympathy for its protagonist the reader is left only with an empty, hollow feeling of let-down.

Plausibility, of course, is not the first test of fiction. Yossarian was an implausible man, though his message of the futility of war went to the heart of a generation. But Bob Slocum just never comes across as anything but a vehicle for Joseph Heller's private vision of hell.



ROSS . . . mellowing

The Doctor Comes Home

By PAT BARCLAY

Sinclair Ross has published a new novel. As statements of fact go, this one may sound relatively innocuous. For some people, however, the appearance of a Ross novel is an occasion for celebration. Best known for As for Me and My House, the story of a disenchanted minister and his unhappy wife marooned in a small prairie town during the Depression, Ross has published three other books since 1941, when As for Me and My House first appeared. Now retired and in his mid-sixties, he has settled in Malaga, Spain — which is a very far cry from the homestead near Shellbrook, Saskatchewan, where he was born.

The chequered career of Sinclair Ross as a writer (he had another career as a Royal Bank employee for 43 years) contains an element of classic Canadiana which could easily form the basis of another Ross novel: his work was good, but it didn't sell. Robert Weaver and William Toye, who co-edited The Oxford Anthology of Canadian Literature in 1973, refer to Ross as "perhaps only half-blessed because . . . (his books) . . . have been much admired by critics and many of his fellow writers but were not, when it would have counted, widely read."

There is no simple answer to the question of "Why?", but part of the reason, surely, was Ross's relentless treatment of his subject matter. What moved him was the psychological effects of small-town and rural life, and it was his fate to have lived and worked in various prairie communities during the most agonizing period of their difficult history. I still cannot recall without a shudder a long-ago televised version of one of his stories — the one about the man who struggles towards his home during a blizzard and next morning is found by his wife, frozen on the barbed wire.

Castor oil realism such as this is not easy to take. "A spoonful of sugar helps the medicine go down" chirped Julie Andrews in that most sugary of movies, Mary Poppins, and more than one generation of children, reared on the Disney version of things, would agree. (The sight of two little polar bear cubs, playfully crawling over their sleeping mother in the film White Wilderness, once caused me to exclaim naively, "Look, aren't they cute?" "Take a closer look", replied my husband, who had worked in the Rockies while a Disney film was being shot nearby, "that mother bear is dead.")

Perhaps now, when memories of the "hard times" are trotted out like so many prize vegetables at a country fair, when what used to be the recent past is fading into the healing mists of legend, perhaps now is the time for Sinclair Ross.

Ross, too, has mellowed. The new novel, which is titled Sawbones Memorial, is set sometime in the early post-war years. He is still writing about isolation in a small prairie town, but this time there is more hope for his characters. And one of them, the new young doctor who is coming to town, is actually returning after years spent away. (Which goes to prove that you can come home again, once in a while.)

Mind you, the new doctor won't find it easy. To some of his patients he will always be "Nick the Hunky", the kid who came from behind the shoe and harness show that smelled of cabbage and garlic, and who wore cutdown pants and clodhopper boots. But come he must, as his friend and mentor, retiring Dr. Hunter, has advised. He must come, not because the town needs him but because he needs the town, to help him exorcise the past for his own future's sake. (The town, not coincidentally, is named Upward.)

Sawbones Memorial consists entirely of monologues, conversations and private thoughts as they are expressed at a joint farewell party and official opening of a new hospital on the occasion of Dr. Hunter's 75th birthday. The technique may be consciously literary but it is certainly effective in presenting the citizens of Upward from many and varied points of view. We see Dr. Hunter himself most clearly — in shock on his wedding night ("Nobody tells you even a bride can be a case"), trading quips and sallies, explaining his agnosticism (" . . . (He) . . . might have left, decided this wasn't the place"), dispensing advice, thinking his most secret thoughts, and so on.

Sawbones Memorial is a worthy successor to As for Me and My House. One reads it with a peculiar blend of deja vu and absorption, for it brings so much of the prairie's history and literature to mind. But Sinclair Ross has found something of his own in a well-tilled field. The title of this novel is more than a simple description; Sawbones Memorial is its author's own tribute to all those unknown country doctors who helped ease the burden of the prairie's desperate past.

SAWBONES MEMORIAL, by Sinclair Ross. McClelland and Stewart. $7.95.

THE INCREDIBLE STORY OF JOE BOYLE

Canada's Heroic 'Man of Action'

By TORCHY ANDERSON

He was born in Toronto, went to sea, fought in the prize ring, survived the "sin and the blaze" of Dawson to make a fortune, raised a Yukon machine-gun company at his own expense in 1914, went to Russia to help untangle the railway mess in 1917, tried to save the Russian royal family before they were murdered, became an intimate of Queen Marie of Romania, was welcomed at Buckingham Palace.

JOE BOYLE: King of the Klondike, by William Rodney. McGraw-Hill. $12.50.

His name: Joe Boyle.

His story is told by William Rodney in a book that must have taken a vast task of research, resulting in 50 pages of notes and index with quotations through the text — not all of them nuggets.

The author could be forgiven if he had prefixed his title with "Incredible." Joe Boyle's story is just that. He arrived in Dawson just before the big rush, along with Frank Slavin, one-time ring champion. It was, possibly, when up to his belly in freezing muck that it struck him there was a better way of getting at the gold. Dredges: vast scows carrying machinery to dig their way to the "pay" at bedrock, making their own "lake" as they swam up stream — that was the answer. The answer made a fortune for Joe Boyle and made him a man sometimes esteemed, sometimes hated, but always ready to lend a helping hand to those in distress.

I think this book gives a fair balance of the character of a man of action, a man never content to sit on his backside when faced with a challenging situation. He showed that when he barged into Europe in the uniform of a Canadian colonel — a "Sam Hughes" honorary colonel. The woods were full of these birds but most of them came home to a comfy roost before they got near the shooting.

Not Joe Boyle.

He raised eyebrows in the War Office and the Foreign Office of His Majesty's British government. Later he won the respect of the British by his work. Later still he was to draw the suspicion — almost hatred — of Canadian "high brass." But when he returned to England with a list of achievements behind him and in tow a son of the Romanian monarch bound for Eton, when he was invited to Buckingham Palace and invited back, that made a difference! It made a greater difference when authorities ordered him to give up the Canadian uniform and King George "ordered" him to wear it.

In the higher places some of the snarling old tomcats began to purr.

I think Rodney has written a fair and well-documented account of Boyle's much publicized (not by him) relationship with Marie, Queen of Romania. Decision: firm friendship without improper conduct.

Boyle could work with Herbert Hoover without friction. He could, and did, save both Russians and Romanians from death. He got some railway traffic in Russia moving when everything was tied in a tight knot — once by packing logs through five feet of snow to get a coal-less locomotive puffing as far as the next station.

When Boyle was awarded Britain's Distinguished Service Order there was a great cackling in headquarter "better 'oles." I mean to say, old boy, how could he have been the "proper" soldier? And some of the nastiest spite was brewed among Canadian high brass.

Big, handsome, decisive Joe Boyle never asked a man to do what he would not do himself. His whole war service, including raising his Yukon machine-gunners, was done out of his own pocket. He took no pay, no allowances. He had guts and brains.

His story, here carefully told, deserves a place in Canadian history as that of a brave man who saw the problem, figured how to solve it and then went to work before red tape caught up with him.

This book is illustrated with a number of good, historic photographs. They are in black-and-white. Joe lends the color.

MORE PROOF OF SHORT STORY BOOM

By GLENNIS ZILM

The rumor keeps going around that the short story is dead. As with the report of Mark Twain's death, however, such reports on the demise of the short story are greatly exaggerated.

The short story, in Canada at least, is alive and doing very nicely, thank you.

In fact, 18 per cent of the fall fiction booklist of new work published in Canada — nearly one of every five fiction books — are short stories, either collections of one writer's work or anthologies of new work from several writers.

74: NEW CANADIAN STORIES, edited by David Helwig and Joan Harcourt. Oberon. $3.50.

MY FATHER'S HOUSE, by Jean-Guy Carrier. Oberon. $3.50.

This review concerns two new collections, including what is perhaps the most important anthology of Canadian short stories, 74: New Canadian Stories. This is the most recent in an annual series started by Oberon Press in 1971 with Fourteen Stories High and followed by 72: New Canadian Stories and 73: New Canadian Stories.

Editors David Helwig and Joan Harcourt have been with the collections from the beginning and are concerned with turning out books of quality that show trends in writing as well as some of the best of new writing for the year.

The current collection illustrates this. Among the 12 stories are work by Audrey Thomas, Alice Munro and Matt Cohen, all with well-deserved reputations for their recent fiction.

One story, by Margaret Gibson Gilboord, comes from a writer who never before has had anything in print. It is one of the best in the collection. Mrs. Gilboord shows intelligent handling of mood, tension and suspense as she works through the exceedingly common setting of a ward in a mental hospital.

Alice Munro's story, Home, also deserves mention. To some extent it pursues a new tactic in writing. She intersperses sections of comment and criticism of her own work throughout the main story. These provide a mood of detachment in a personal story, but are also a means of moving the story line along and blend nicely with the entertaining theme.

One story, The Real Mrs. Hunter, is thoroughly unlikable — but is extremely well-written for all that. It sets out to make the reader uncomfortable and tense over a ridiculously small incident involving a young teacher who finds he is losing his hair, and it succeeds admirably.

Another collection, My Father's House, contains 11 stories by Jean-Guy Carrier. Carrier, 28, is a distant cousin of Quebec novelist Roch Carrier and this is the first collection of his work.

His first language was French, although he has worked for a number of years as a reporter in English and this collection is written in a clear, pure and direct English that suits the melancholy chord of the work.

The stories tell of the life of a young boy growing to manhood in the small Quebec town of St.-Camille, where the author was born. Although each story stands on its own, they also fit together and make a larger statement. All deal with loneliness, the aching loneliness of human spirits that cannot reach out and touch any others.

Atwood: A Wary Lowering of Defences

By SUSAN MUSGRAVE

The issue of a new Margaret Atwood book is an "event", of the same nature that a new Brando film or a new Dylan record used to be. In each case the addict is prepared for the distinctive presence, voice and style; but because these are not ordinary artists, it is the unpredictable developments that most fascinate.

Once an entertainer has offered us excellence it is in our nature to expect a falling off: the verve may have failed, the stance become predictable or we ourselves may have outgrown our tastes. But if there is a freshness, a new departure in the latest offering, it is bound to be disturbing: alive, exploring artists such as these tend to be ahead of their audience and to challenge its stock responses as they extend their own discoveries.

So the real trailblazers of contemporary entertainment build up a following that is critical almost to the point of hostility: and a poet is far more vulnerable than most. Brando, by definition, comes at us indirectly, through his roles; Dylan can, and has, got away with downright kitsch through good musicianship and a mocking shrug. But the poet, and Atwood particularly, seems to the modern audience to be speaking directly and nakedly in her own voice. To judge the poems is to judge the poet.

It's monstrously unfair of us, and only a culture that lives on the fag ends of romanticism would try it. The poet must be allowed his masks, his many voices: it is only fair to quote Shakespeare as saying "This above all, to thine own self be true" if you also have him say "I am a very foolish fond old man".

But we're not an ideal audience, and we have, from her books, developed a mythic figure who bears the name "Margaret Atwood". Her abilities: sharp, combative brevity; an outraged aloneness, even aloofness; a habitat comparable to that of Plath, Sexton, Lowell, but a toughness that prefers fighting to bleeding all over the page; an involvement in relationships with insensitive men who blunder roughshod across her frontiers and are finally demolished with a florentine phrase.

She is also, I might add, a very clever writer: and cleverness is so unfashionable today, nowhere more than in Canada, that it is almost an insult. Time will tell.

So when this para-Atwood, this laconic, embattled shrewish figure, brings out a book called You Are Happy we instantly suspect irony: worse than that, sarcasm. But we are wrong: for the image is changing—one senses that almost against her will and certainly against her better judgment, para-Atwood is lowering her defenses and acknowledging that being vulnerable is a vital preliminary to being alive.

The title poem is a good example—in its original form it was quite long and-a couple, walking separately, find a murdered deer in a ditch and then drive home with their separate perceptions. "You are happy" is an accusation: it means "you are smug, you are blind, you are oblivious to the real way things are as only I see them". But as it now appears the poem is without the long reflective drive home and the ending uses "you" in the way we often use it conversationally to mean "you" or "one" or "me". The "happy" is double-edged, certainly, but it's applied to the speaker as well as to her companions.

Throughout the book there are instances of narcissa not just watching herself but actually seeing herself. The speaker realizes:

"There are two islands at least, they do not exclude each other"

Her unshakeable sense of self leads her not to reject her lover but to say "This is not what I want — but I want this also."

And there are elements, too, of a more open dialogue with the audience. In her previous book, Power Politics, that charting of the perilous borderline between isolation and involvement, Atwood maintains a constant substratum of mythic allusions (largely to the border ballads) under the terse modern speaking voice of the poems. It gave a strength and reverberation but much of it was so subtle that it was lost. That was one aspect of the cleverness I spoke of.

In You Are Happy the voice is not so uniformly contemporary and the mythic world has surfaced, inviting us to share in its archetypal maze. Central to the book is the image of the enchantress, Circe, and of the men who come to her island, enslaved by false desires and punished ultimately by an apt transformation into "lower" animals. Two fascinating sections are devoted to the animals' viewpoints and to the parallel myth of the mud woman: the ideal construction of lust who does not talk back and cannot walk away.

Para-Atwood is in fact as wary and skeptical as ever, but she has sensed that there are more approaches to the sea of troubles than just taking up arms. In this book she has at least got her feet wet.

It is easy to give the flavor of most poets simply by quoting two or three lines from a poem. But in a really tightly constructed poem this is impossible: the last line of such a poem involves the first and an isolated group of lines is as inadequate as a detail of an angel's face from a Botticelli fresco. All the same, the concluding lines from the book do give some indication of para-Atwood's new voice and awareness:

"You are intact, you turn towards me, your eyes opening, the eyes intricate and easily bruised . . .
alive, open yourself like this and become whole."

As for the real Margaret Atwood, she speaks with her own voice, charts her own course, and remains, without question, one of this country's most important poets.

ATWOOD . . . on own course

Elton's Kiki Sidekick

By BARBARA CHARONE

The crowds gathering in 33 North American cities over 43 dates between September 25th and December 3rd are there to see Elton John — his tour sold out quickly after ticket announcements in each city — but they are getting a second box-office rocket as a bonus: the Kiki Dee Band.

Kiki Dee — "I've Got the Music in Me" — is the product of a careful collaboration with Elton. "Don't worry," she said during a Chicago stop on her debut American tour earlier this year, "we'll do a double album together one day. We'll be the new Marvin Gaye and Tami Terrell."

That was said with a sly wink, though: The collaboration is less musical than financial — although Elton, Dee Murray and Nigel Olsson play on her Rocket Records debut album, "Loving and Free"; Elton and Bernie Taupin contributed tunes; and Elton co-produced it. Currently she is virtually sole support for Rocket, Elton John's label.

He is giving her an establishment boost that has included, in addition to her billing on the current tour and the studio assistance, personal sherpherding through the earlier visit. On that swing, she played openers for everyone from the Beach Boys and the Guess Who to Steely Dan, bringing her own brand of boogie excitation to admiring crowds and lingering with them outside the dressing-room door — signing autographs like a giggling school girl and accepting shy congratulations on the show.

Finally one fan mustered up the courage to mumble in disbelief, "Do you know him? Do you really know him?" Inside the cramped dressing room, "him," Elton John, was smiling like a proud father overlooking a daughter at the brink of success. All the fuss might seem strange for an unknown singer, but Kiki Dee is no overnight sensation, having paid the obligatory dues on the English cabaret circuit and later signing as one of the first white artists on Tamla-Motown. Staunch supporters have whispered stardom for years, holding their breaths for the judgment day. This time around she just might succeed.

"My association with Elton John has worked well," Kiki said later, relaxing when the lights and pressures are off. "He's very aware of the dangers involved in overshadowing me. What he's done for me is give me the confidence to keep going. He's got a special talent for bringing things out of people. But there certainly hasn't been any hype put on me at all.

"What I hope comes across is simply that Elton John liked my voice and wanted me on the label. There's no big hype involved. I mean the album ('Loving and Free') is very much me."

After several unsuccessful attempts to establish a stable Rocket artist roster, Kiki Dee is the fledgling label's first chance for the big time. Sharon Lawrence, until recently the press officer for Rocket, says, "Rocket's past history was merely preliminary. Kiki really is the beginning of the company." It's a team effort, with the whole Elton John Rocket machinery hard at work. Yet there's nothing pathetic about it; the emphasis definitely is on talent. You won't find any 8x10 glossies of Elton and Kiki romping through a field of clover.

"Yeah," Kiki relfects, "I suppose I am Rocket's last hope. So much depends on management though," she says, glancing quickly toward the man responsible for both Kiki and Elton, John Reid. "The thing with Elton and John is that they know America well. They understand the American market and how I should be presented. All of us felt the album was geared more toward American audiences than the English ones."

Perhaps surprisingly, the album paid off with a British chart success, "Lonnie and Josie," but recording sessions this summer for her second album (not yet released) produced an American hit, "I've Got the Music in Me." And Kiki feels more comfortable in America. "It's very hard to succeed in England unless you're into the chart thing. I'm not going to be Gary Glitter or Suzi Quatro. I don't want to be a lady singer doing a TV show onstage or appeal exclusively to the teenies."

The timing of her North American assault is no accident. The lady is ready. "It's so weird," she says, shaking her head in disbelief. "After singing for so long I'm only now feeling at ease with what I'm doing. I've gone through that whole image thing so many times. Image shouldn't be forced; talent should suffice. Six or seven years ago I'd have been happy to do this or look like that," she mocks. "But I'm too mature for that now. I'd gone through this stage where I thought I should be a classy lady singer like Nancy Wilson. Then I went through this whole Rita Coolidge thing. But within the last few months I've lost those feelings. It's just me now."

After developing her own style, Kiki concentrated on taking advantage of her onstage femininity while not seeming helpless and vulnerable. What with clothes connoisseur Elton John contributing to her wardrobe, it's no wonder she looks so good onstage. "I went shopping with Cher and Diana Ross," Elton was overheard to say in New York; "and I bought more dresses than they did." "There's no reason why a girl can't look like a girl but still boogie," Kiki says, with cute emphasis on the "oogie" squishing up her nose slightly.

Kiki Dee this year is adding to the dues that she once thought were long over.

Jubalay a Winner

Why is it, when it comes to the arts, many people have so little faith in the home town product or individual?

If you want to see incredulity or outright disbelief mirrored in a human face try telling a few of the uncommitted that Victoria's symphony, conservatory, or art gallery are among the very best in Canada.

Five out of six will give you just what you're expecting. Yet all your statements could be verified by the recorded opinions of outside experts.

Because of this obtuseness, how often the ship has sailed from the harbor leaving the people lamenting.

A typical incident has come to my attention recently because of my interest in a new, enchanting and, within the limits of its exposure, highly successful Canadian musical show.

Jubalay is its name and it's Vancouver-born and bred. But where did it get its smashing send-off? In Winnipeg.

Manitoba Theatre artistic director Eddie Gilbert heard the tapes of the songs that had been assembled by the Vancouver creators, Pat Rose and Merv Campone, and immediately, sensing it had a hit property at hand pre-empted the rights and staged it a few months later to overwhelming audience and critical response. A response that has been uniform wherever the show has been seen.

As a result of having premiered Jubalay in May of this year, MTC will receive a royalty percentage for the first year. And as Jubalay has already had successful runs at Ottawa's National Arts Centre and in Vancouver, Calgary and Toronto, MTC's percipience has already been rewarded with profits in excess of $20,000.

But in Vancouver, although the creator's efforts were first made in its direction, the Playhouse Theatre would not even lend an ear.

What is Jubalay and who are its creators? I wish that I might have had an opportunity to see this show when it was running at the Arts Club in Vancouver. As it is the original cast recording has provided my only access to the charming and at times, haunting, music and appealing lyrics.

The show bears a relationship to that unique musical theatre experience, Jacques Brel is Alive and Well and Living in Paris. In fact its creators acknowledge their debt to Brel in a song entitled The Craftsman.

All four of the cast — Rose, Brent Carver, Ruth Nichol and Diane Stapely, as well as co-writer Campone — were involved with the long-running production of Jacques Brel at the Vancouver Arts Club two years ago. Still the music is not in any real sense derivative.

It is the product of two intensely musical and theatrically adept people. Rose (who incidentally is a nephew of well known Victoria theatre personality Helen Smith), is a professional actor-singer of wide experience. Campone is also a notable Vancouver actor with a fine lyrical ear.

Jubalay is not a plotted musical. Rose regards it simply as "an unpretentious little revue". It sets out through the medium of its dozen or so songs to communicate a point-of-view — in this case a child's view of the passing parade. The child is Jubalay, a street urchin singing for pennies.

There is talk of a possible 1975 cross-country exposure for this stirring Canadian creation through the Canada Council touring office.

I can only hope that when the wheels do get moving they will roll right into Victoria, and that Victorians will prove to be more discerning than they often have been in the past concerning native talent.

Rolling Stone Jagger Triumphs

By JON LANDAU

Mick Jagger was the subject recently of a malevolent, misinformed, pseudo-psychological biography called "Mick Jagger: Everybody's Lucifer," written by Tony Scaduto. Like so much writing about the lead singer of the Rolling Stones, it concentrated on the myth rather than the music. Well, this listener is more fascinated with his talent than his controversial and often fascinating life: First of all, Mick Jagger is a great rock & roll singer.

During the last six years he has sung his way from one peak to another: from Sympathy for the Devil to Gimme Shelter to Tumbling Dice, and now to the title song of the Rolling Stones' sensational new album, It's Only Rock 'n' Roll. The difference this time is that he doesn't sing just a few songs great: He sings them all great.

The title aptly describes the band's intent. Disclaiming the larger claims that have been made for their art, they announce that they are all trying to be what they have always been: a rock & roll band. They aren't looking to create the single masterpiece that has held earlier albums together. As a result, the album's best cuts aren't up to the very best of their past work, but then the low points are much better than the soft spots that have generally marred their albums. In particular, it's a freer, looser and earthier album than their wobbly release of last year, Goat's Head Soup.

Part of this album's sense of fun comes from the band's willingness to entertain themselves first and us second. They could have resurrected the Temptations' great "Ain't Too Proud to Beg" for their own amusement — even though they do it more than proud.

Another side to the carefreeness comes from Jagger's willingness to mock that very public image that is so often the subject of gossip columnists. Hence, "Luxury" and "Short and Curlies" seem to refer directly to the problems with wife Bianca. Whether they do or don't will keep people like Scaduto guessing: Far more importantly, they are just two of the album's fine pieces of music.

But when Jagger sings about the strains of publicity and satisfying an audience as large as the Stones', he gets plenty serious, without becoming overbearing. On "It's Only Rock 'n Roll," he sticks the knife into his own admirers and twists it with a vengeance. Some rock critics have looked down upon this cut as a retread of earlier and better Stones' music. But I think they're missing the song's impassioned sense of desperation.

They are also missing the brilliance of the singing and playing. The Rolling Stones have never had the technical range of many of the pop groups. But few long-standing rock bands have played with such consistent depth. At their best, they sound like a single mind is dictating every note on the record. Guitarist Keith Richard comes up with one compelling figure after another. And Charlie Watts once again proves that he understands the role of the rock drummer as well as anyone.

Bermingham Returns

A former Victorian will return to his native city when the Canadian Opera Company brings Puccini's La Boheme to the Royal Theatre Nov. 24 and 25.

The outstanding bass voice of Ron Bermingham will be heard in the role of Colline, one of the group of Parisian "Bohemians" who befriend the shy heroine, Mimi.

Well-known in this city for his many solo appearances in oratorio with the UVic Chorus and Victoria Symphony, Bermingham completed his formal voice training at Indiana University.

In the 1972-73 season he performed in two Vancouver Opera Association productions and followed these by winning the 1973 Metropolitan Opera Auditions for Western Canada and honorable mention in the semi-finals in Seattle.

At present he is living in Toronto but has returned to Vancouver from time to time for solo engagements, including a CBC nationwide broadcast of Handel's Messiah with the Vancouver Bach Choir.

The performance of La Boheme is a special attraction of Victoria Symphony Society, which has sponsored several past visits of the Canadian Opera Company.

This fully professional company evolved in 1950 out of Toronto's Royal Conservatory Opera School, taking its first step into professionalism in 1948.

Herman Geiger-Torel is its general director and the man who initiated the first opera festival with the company at the Royal Alexandra Theatre in Toronto in 1950.

The touring company grew out of that venture and its repertoire has enlarged and now encompasses practically the entire operatic catalogue, old and new.

Memorable among its Victoria performances have been Mozart's Cosi fan Tutti, Donizetti's Don Pasquale and Offenbach's Orpheus in the Underworld.

RECENTLY RETIRED as Dean of the Faculty of Architecture, University of Toronto, Thomas Howarth will give an illustrated lecture Wednesday at Victoria Art Gallery at 8 p.m. Dr. Howarth's subject will be Charles Rennie Mackintosh (1868-1928) who introduced Art Nouveau to Scotland and is well known as the architect for the Glasgow School of Art. The lecture will examine Mackintosh's contribution to the modern movement at the turn of the century with particular reference to his furniture, interior design and craftwork. Admission is $1 and for members, students and pensioners 50 cents.

Soviet Pianist Here Next

Considered one of the most important pianists in the world today, Nicolai Petrov will be guest artist at the forthcoming pair of Victoria Symphony concerts Nov. 17 and 18.

In major music centres the Russian pianist's talents are regarded as phenomenal and his virtuosity almost unrivalled.

"He possesses such total technique and control," commented the Christian Science Monitor, "that he brings to mind the heroics of Horowitz . . ."

Petrov, who first came into prominence in 1962 when he won the title of Laureate at the Van Cliburn International Competition in Texas, will be given free reign for his brilliant artistry when he performs the dazzling Piano Concerto by Aram Khatchaturian with Laszlo Gati conducting the Victoria Symphony.

On the Wednesday following he will be heard in a solo recital at McPherson Playhouse.

The concerts will also be distinguished by a first performance by the orchestra of Paul Hindemith's masterpiece, Mathis the Painter. This is a symphony consisting of three orchestral excerpts from Hindemith's opera which dealt with events in the life of Mathis Gruenwald, a great German painter of the Reformation.

Powerful and dramatic as well as intricate, this performance by Gati and the orchestra is a must for music lovers.

SUPPLIES STOLEN

Camera equipment worth about $700 was stolen overnight from the Jus-Rite Photo, 716 Yates.

City police said entry was gained by cutting a hole through the plate glass front window.

Rape Victims Allowed Abortion

NICOSIA (UPI) — Women raped by Turkish soldiers who invaded Cyprus last July will be allowed to have abortions, a government spokesman said Friday.

He said the Cyprus house of representatives has repealed an anti-abortion law to give rape victims a chance to terminate their pregnancies legally.

An estimated 700 women who became pregnant as a result of rape are expected to take advantage of the measure, the spokesman said.

SLAVIC VERVE

Exotic in color in the more than 400 costumes and physical prowess of a bravura nature exploited by top-notch choreography combine to make Frula a spectacular dance show.

The Yugoslavian company of 36 is coming to the Royal Theatre for one performance only, Nov. 13 at 8:30 p.m. Flattering comparisons have been drawn by critics between Frula and Russia's Moiseyev, Mexico's Fiesta Mexicana and the Philippine's Bayanihan.

Invasions and conquests of Yugoslavia through the centuries have resulted in the cultures of Arabia, the Moors, Turks, Greeks, Italians and Spanish infiltrating the arts of the small nation.

There is therefore to be found in the performances of this dance ensemble the acrobatics and fire of the Slav mingled with the grace of the Arab and the stylistic awareness of the Latin.

The company name is taken from a traditional Macedonian folk instrument called a frula which is similar in design to a recorder. It is a one or two-reed instrument used by herdsmen to gather their flocks.

In Recital

Third in the present series of Wednesday evening concerts at St. John's Anglican Church takes place next week when the featured artist will be baritone Charles Dorrington.

His recital program will consist of arias from the oratorios and operas of Handel and oratorios of Mendelssohn. Included will be excerpts from the well-loved Messiah and Elijah.

THE TOWN DRUNK (Ed Rowley) is not too inebriated to cast an admiring glance at Nellie, the Beautiful Heroine (Dorothy Wolff) in the St. Luke's Players meller-drammer, A Fate Worst Than Death, an original script by Betty Jeanpierre.

Young Artists Give Concert

A recital by two outstanding young Victoria musicians will be presented Nov. 16 at 8 p.m. at Craigdarroch Castle.

Elizabeth Bredberg, violinist, a former student at Victoria Conservatory of Music and now performing professionally with the Calgary Symphony Orchestra, is one of the featured artists.

With her as a program partner will be the gifted pianist Susan de Burgh. They will play music by Schumann, Tartini, Hindemith and Alan Rawsthorne.

Heroes! Villains! Girls!

Another old-style "meller-drammer" complete with pure and lovely heroine, upright hero, villains, a drunk and some fallen ladies, will celebrate St. Luke's Players 100th production in 25 years of existence.

The play is an original by member Betty Jeanpierre. Its title: A Fate Worse Than Death!

The play: liberally interspersed with songs, jokes and topical political allusions, opens Wednesday at St. Luke's Hall, Cedar Hill Cross Road. It will continue through Nov. 16 with curtain at 8:15 p.m.

Set in Victoria and the Island in the lusty nineties, locales are specifically James Bay, Johnson Street, Comox and Cumberland. Action is concerned with, believe it or not, the efforts of Nellie and her mother to pay off their mortgage, the villains' efforts to seize their home and the courage and perspicacity of Nellie's true love, Cpl. Alan Righteous of the NWMP in coming to her aid.

Director of the production is Dennis Kershaw, who has had long experience in local amateur theatre circles.

Dorothy Wolff appears in the role of Nellie and Terry Martin as the dauntless corporal. Others in the cast are Clo Dowling, Ron Way, Dave Shearer, Ed Rowley, Marilyn McKenzie and Lois Fraser, plus an assortment of extras appearing as pirates, Chinese and citizens of old Victoria.

Supporting the show at the piano is Joan Bulmer.

Tickets available at the door each evening, are $1.50 with students and pensioners $1.

Canada Music Week

A proclamation by Lieutenant-Governor Walter Owen, has named the week of Nov. 17-24 as Canada Music Week in B.C.

Sponsored annually for the last 15 years throughout Canada by the Canadian Federation of Music Teachers' Association, the week is intended to focus on music composed by Canadians.

The Victoria Branch of the B.C. Registered Music Teachers' Association will mark the event with a recital to be held at St. Matthias Church Hall on the corner of Richardson Street and Richmond Road.

Commencing at 8 p.m. on Nov. 23 it will present a number of outstanding Victoria music students in a program of Canadian music. Some local composers will be among those having works performed or performing themselves.

Tickets will be available at the door at $1; students, 50 cents.

Theatre Workshops Set

The South Vancouver Island Drama Zone is reminding B.C. Drama Association members that time is getting short for registering for three theatre workshops scheduled within the next three to four weeks.

Deadline for all three is Nov. 15.

Workshops are Basic Directors' Workshop conducted by Bastion Theatre Sunday Nov. 24 and Dec. 1; fee $10 per person. Advanced Directors' Workshops directed by Carl Hare and Company One, Dec. 7-8 and 14-15; Fee, director candidates $25, observers, $10. Jack Trueman Technical Workshop, Nov. 30; Fee $10.

Foster Homes Fall Behind Capital Population Swell

Victoria Times
THIRD SECTION
family

Could fostering be for you?

If you think it is, circle Wednesday, Nov. 13, on your calendar.

At 7:30 p.m. in the lounge of the Junction Centre Building, 1627 Fort Street, members of the human resources branch will explain what it's all about.

Social worker Faith Magwood, who is helping to organize this meeting for prospective foster parents, says the number of foster homes has not kept pace with the population explosion in the Capital region.

"We have some fantastic individuals who have three children of their own, two foster children and we phone and say 'can you, in an emergency take another? We'll provide the bed if you'll provide the basement sort of thing'.

"We always seem to be in the position where we just squeeze by," says Magwood.

Those who take on the role of foster parents are not "jumping in cold" as there are two groups who want to see that the experience is rewarding.

First is the staff at the human resources branch and the other is the Foster Parents Association.

The foster parents group was first started by Bernice Packford (who still directs the program) in the 1960s and since then has blossomed throughout North america.

Ideally, says Magwood, there should be four or five homes available for each child so the social worker can go out with the child and together select a home.

Now, in some cases, it's a matter of getting the child a bed in a reasonably suitable home, says Magwood.

Every month there is a meeting of prospective parents. At following "assessment" sessions with social workers it's decided what sort of child would be best for their home.

"Some people like to be with small children . . . some like boys better than girls and some like only to have teenagers around. What's best for them is considered because we would not place totally unsuitable children in their home."

Magwood says that one of the more fantastic recent developments is that existing foster parents are getting involved in recruiting.

"It's far more effective when it comes from them. Some are holding coffee parties in their homes and inviting their neighbors and friends to talk about the program.

Magwood says they explain what it's all about, what it costs, what reimbursements are available and what a person can expect to get out of fostering in a personal way.

The social worker says two things are hurting their recruitment program . . . the trend to smaller families and inflation.

"The later is seeing more mothers working and while it is not impossible to place children in a home where the mother works, there are difficulties."

Magwood says most children involved are under some stress and they need the stability of a home where the mother is there.

"Fortunately there are still people who have the home and hearth as the centre of their lives and it's this group that really respond to the foster parent program."

Statistically, as of June 30 of this year there were 817 children in the care of the department of human resources in the Capital Region.

Of these, 313 were in regular foster homes (less than two years); 106 in permanent. The balance, 455 children, were mainly in group homes, treatment centres and other institutions.

In August, the latest placement figures available show that: in the newborn to 8 months, 5 were placed; 19 children placed in the 8 months to 6 year group; 5 in the next group which takes in children up to 10 years and 21 children, 10 years and up needed placement.

As the latest foster parent pamphlets states:

"If you believe you could provide a comfortable and helpful environment for a child, if you could accept and respect a foster child's loyalty and feelings towards his own family, and if you could be flexible enough to accept behavior that would not be tolerable in your own children . . . then join us . . . on Wednesday, Nov. 13, in the Junction Centre Building Lounge.'

RESIDENTS of St. Mary's priory recently helped Mrs. Ella Lane, right, celebrate her 101st birthday. They baked her a cake, found room on it for a candle for each year, then stood back while she opened congratulating notes from such notables as Lt.-Gov. Walter Owens, Premier Dave Barrett and Mayor Peter Pollen. But, she's not content to just sit around and marvel at her age — when she turned 100, she started lecturing to visiting youngsters on aging and how it feels to be 100.

Acupuncture in China 'Surprisingly Rare'

LONDON (UPI) — A British scientist who recently visited China says that the use of acupuncture in medical practice there "is surprisingly rare and the number of cases is decreasing."

Prof. Pat Wall, head of the cerebral functions unit at University College in London and co-author of the current most popular theory of pain, said his studies showed acupuncture "does not work very well on many people."

But, he stressed in an article in the magazine New Scientist, it remains "a fascinating phenomenon."

"I very much hope that because I have written here in classical terms, I shall not be accused of denying the existence of acupuncture analgesia or the achievement of the Chinese," he wrote.

On the contrary, the article said, acupuncture presents western medicine with "a challenge to examine and dissect the phenomenon, to try to understand its mechanisms and to see if better methods can be developed."

Wall said he had observed a large number of major operations performed under acupuncture and this had led him to abandon an earlier theory that hypnosis was involved. He added:

"First, what are the facts? Operations are certainly completed under acupuncture but its use is surprisingly rare and the number of cases is decreasing. In 1973, the most active hospital using acupuncture which we visited had carried out 5,200 major surgical procedures but only 324 (6 per cent) were under acupuncture with the rest being done with conventional chemical anesthesia.

"It is crucial to realize that the majority of the 324 patients had the effect of acupuncture backed up by three familiar anti-pain techniques. They were sedated with barbiturate, both the night before and on the morning of the operation.

"They were given an intravenous narcotic analgesic immediately before the operation and frequently this dose was repeated during the operation. Lastly, particularly painful regions such as the ribs or the root of the lung were infiltrated with a local anesthetic.

"However, one must stress that these reinforcement are not by themselves sufficient to explain the whole phenomenon especially because they were not used in certain very rare instances

He praised the Chinese hospitals highly.

"On one occasion only," he said, "We witnessed the startling sight of a non-narcotized young woman, bright, conscious and talking, having a thyroid cyst removed without any signs whatsoever of pain or distress . . .

"However, in the other operations we did see varying sighs of misery, borne with a most impressive and admirable fortitude, which would be rare in a western patient."

He said he had been told that in some cases acupuncture operations had to be interrupted and conventional anesthesia introduced.

Careless Doctors Rapped

TORONTO (CP) — Doctors who are irresponsible in prescribing drugs such as tranquilizers and antibiotics should have rigid controls imposed on their prescription practices, Dr. Bette Stephenson, president of the Canadian Medical Association CMA says.

She told an international prescription-drug conference that this minority of doctors should also be severely disciplined by their provincial medical colleges.

Doctors have a responsibility to prescribe drugs, judiciously and sparingly, but many doctors are ignoring these responsibilities and doing their patients a gross disservice, said Dr. Stephenson, a Toronto family doctor.

The irresponsible doctors are difficult to identify but those suspected should be under surveillance by authorities, the outspoken CMA president told the meeting of doctors, pharmacists, drug manufacturers and government officials.

She also said the government, or medical licensing authorities should force doctors to take continuing education programs to help them keep pace with advances in pharmacology.

She was commenting on concerns expressed at the conference that over-prescribing of antibiotics for conditions such as the common cold, and often for viral infections for which they are useless, is creating drug-resistant strains of bacteria.

Also of concern was evidence that mood-modifying drugs are being grossly misused by doctors to relieve minor anxieties and neurosis.

Other speakers suggested that doctors are prone to make errors in prescribing because of shortcomings in their medical education and because they are misled by drug-company representatives.

Another expert, Dr. John Ruedy of McGill University, Montreal, said another major concern is the propensity to miscalculate drug dosage in individual patients, causing adverse reactions. For many drugs, medical science could not produce data on proper dosage but could only tell by toxic effects when the dosage was too high.

Mini Is Back

NEW YORK (AP) — Call it what you will, the mini is back.

Fashion designer Halston calls it "the skimp" and included it Thursday in his 1975 spring ready-to-wear collection.

"American women are known for their beautiful legs," Halston said, describing the profusion of mini-length tunics that appeared in everything from his ubiquitous ultrasuede to silk shantung and chiffon.

Halston also showed skirt lengths from below the knee to the floor. And he offered clothes ranging from tailored suits and dress-jacket outfits for day to more alluring cocktail and evening outfits in ballerina and floor lengths.

Coats were either long and slim or cut above the knee with wide sleeves.

Saying he wants to "bring a smile back to fashion" to counteract "an oppressive mood," Halson offered whimsical prints of butterflies, violets or coffee beans.

DRINKING TOO MUCH? WORRIED? WANT TO QUIT?

In a society which tolerates and even encourages drinking we have always come down hard on drunks and even harder on drunken women.

Her assault on the bottle represents the violation of a rigid taboo. We have locked her into a wife-mother role and, when she shatters our image of her femininity, we are angry and punish her with our contempt for being a woman as well as an alcoholic.

We won't admit her as a statistic thereby making it impossible to provide treatment. Estimates of the number of women alcoholics are hard to come by. They range all the way from one in six to 50-50. Alcoholics Anonymous believes the ratio is at least one in four and probably one in three.

The double standard is nowhere more evident than in problem drinking and, as one result, we drive the whole thing underground.

Through boredom, frustration or loneliness, women drink — but often secretly. They drink at home, at parties and at lunches, but mostly alone. But they do drink.

A persistent misconception is that the only women with drinking problems are the bored losers at either end of the social scale, down and outers or leathery women socialites. It's not so.

Problem drinking among women is in all levels of the community.

And it's also true that women alcoholics are open to some terrible personal losses. For every 10 wives who see an alcoholic husband through, only one husband remains with an alcoholic wife. And they risk losing their children.

If you are a suffering woman alcoholic or if you know of one, call us. We might be able to help.

We will respect your privacy. Call 383-1633.

Home Labor, Managing Crucial

elizabeth forbes

Realization of the important contribution a housewife makes and recognition of the family as an important economic unit within society, were recurring themes in a talk given by June Menzies, at the third annual Women's Festival sponsored by Victoria's Status of Women Action Group, at University of Victoria last weekend.

As a member of the National Advisory Council on the Status of Women, Menzies' arguments (as reported in the press) were sharp and to the point.

She made it clear that men as well as women should remember that labor and management within the home are just as important as labor and management outside the home. That a woman serving within the home as wife and mother accumulates, in a lifetime, services that would be worth more than $285,000 on the labor market.

"We must recognize this and acknowledge that housewives are economically productive "not economically parasitical," she said.

First step toward this end, she said, would be inclusion of wives and mothers in the Canada Pension Plan.

"They must be able to build up independent security, whether or not their work has been done in the paid sector."

After reading reports of the Menzies speech, I dug out of my files a copy of an address given in the House of Commons in mid-October by national health and welfare minister Marc Lalonde, who is now the minister responsible for the status of women.

In it he referred to the question of coverage under the Canada and Quebec Pension Plans for spouses who are not in the labor force.

"I can assure you that it is a problem which has my close attention and I am working hard to find a solution that is acceptable to all," Lalonde told the Commons.

He then explained this matter is being studied by the Canada Pension Plan Advisory Board and the Advisory Council on the Status of Women.

He hoped, he said, to have their reports "this fall" and would then want to discuss the proposals with his colleagues, the provincial ministers of welfare.

As far as I know, Menzies did not say anything about those studies, or if the report of her Council had been completed.

Unless the three areas in which she insisted women's situation must change before their position can be considered equitable (namely, within the institution of marriage, on a social, political and taxation basis and in the economy) just might happen to be included in such a report.

I also have in my files a discussion paper on Housewives and the Canada Pension Plan, presented by Lalonde to the House of Commons standing committee on health, welfare and social affairs, in April of this year.

As an addition to the Menzies speech, it makes excellent reading, especially as it gives increased knowledge of the reappraisals concerning the position of women in society and in the home.

These reappraisals bear upon the Canada Pension Plan in two main respects:

● Certain provisions within the plan accord different treatment to male and female contributors and beneficiaries, and this has been questioned.

● Views have been expressed that housewives who remain at home and do not draw salaries as members of the working force, should be enabled to participate in the plan.

In connection with the first issue, action was then under way, with full agreement of provincial governments, to amend the CPP to provide equal treatment of men and women, also the correction of discriminatory provisions in a number of other acts. As it happened, however, the call for an election sidetracked those plans.

Now this Omnibus Bill on the Status of Women has been reintroduced in the Commons by LaLonde and it is hoped will be passed.

The second issue, regarding housewives, was discussed by federal and provincial welfare ministers in Edmonton, last February.

All governments recognized then, that there were "complex difficulties" associated with the implementation of this objective. It was also agreed the issues involved needed to be examined not only by governments, but by the public at large.

This last is given as the reason for the discussion paper, "in the hope that it will provoke wider public discussion of the issues, and that from it the best answers may emerge."

The paper also makes it clear that while it uses the word "housewife" since it is most frequently the woman who remains at home to look after the interests of the family unit, the same principles apply also in cases when men remain at home for this purpose.

In my next column I will give you excerpts from the paper that deal with the issue as it stands, the philosophy of the Canada Pension Plan and the alternatives for the participation of housewives.

Blind Date Trap

DEAR ABBY: It all started last summer when a very pretty but shallow 18-year-old girl came here from Italy to visit her aunt. We were fixed up on a blind date. I am 19.

Abby, if it is possible for a girl to rape a boy, that is what happened to me. I mean, she was really eager. We dated all summer.

She went back to Italy and we corresponded. Then she started writing things like, "Nothing else matters to me in this world but you." Also, "I can't wait until we can be married." (I swear to God I never mentioned marriage to her once.)

I tried to break off the correspondence, but she wrote to me anyway. Now she writes that she is coming here to live with her aunt for a YEAR! That's the last thing I want. I want to write and tell her if she's coming to be near me, she shouldn't, because I have a lot of college ahead of me yet. I hate to sound like a heel, but I don't love this girl and I wish she would leave me alone.

She told me that when she was 17 she had a broken love affair and tried to commit suicide and spent three months in a mental hospital, so I have to be careful how I handle her.

Please help me. —Desperate.

DEAR DES: With her history of emotional instability, do not send her a "Dear Jane" letter. You can't stop her from coming, but if she does, let her down gently and ease her out of your life as subtly as possible.

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago, I moved in with an older couple, Jimmy and Laura. They treated me like a daughter and helped me get my head together. I was pretty messed up. I feel I owe them a lot.

Six months ago, I got my own apartment, and three months later I began seeing a lot of this man I work with. I have fallen in love with him. He moved in with me last week and wants to marry me when his divorce is final. I think I love him enough to marry him, but I'm not sure yet. One of the problems is that he is twice as old as I am.

I invited Jimmy and Laura over to meet my guy. They told me privately that they think I am looking for a father and I need to see a shrink. I feel I owe it to them to take their advice. But then if I do, wouldn't it show that I am not sure about my feelings for my guy? —D.H.

DEAR D. Yes. But it's nothing to be ashamed of. That takes intelligence! It's a lot easier to make a mistake than remedy it. Get into therapy, and stay single until you are sure of your feelings.

DEAR ABBY: I made the mistake of lending a sympathetic ear to a woman who works with me, and now she calls me nearly every evening at home to tell me her troubles by the hour.

I am not exaggerating, Abby, she often talks for a solid hour and if I don't make some excuse to get away from her, she talks longer.

I have left the phone and rung my own door bell just to end the conversation. Once I actually left the phone for 15 minutes, came back, and she never knew she had been talking to herself. When she starts talking, she doesn't even wait for the occasional sign that she's being heard.

I feel sorry for her, but I simply cannot devote every evening listening to her complaints about her family, her job, and what's wrong with the world. —Weary.

DEAR WEARY: Now that you have allowed her to make a habit of calling you, it won't be easy to dissuade her, but you have to start somewhere, so tell her you are too busy to visit when she calls, and after a while she'll get the message.

Program Mixes Young and Old

By ANN KELLY

OWEN SOUND, Ont. (CP) — The old and the young have something in common. They both need companionship. What better way to meet this need than operating a nursery school in a senior citizen's home?

At Dufferin-Oakes in Shelburne, a co-operative nursery school for three and four-year-olds is in its second year of operation. This same home, equipped with an indoor pool, provides swimming facilities for retarded children and adults in Dufferin County.

During the summer months, under an Opportunities for Youth Grant, nine teeagers operated Connection 74, a project to integrate young and old.

The program, for rural preschoolers, was conducted in the auditorium of Dufferin-Oakes with residents of the home encouraged to participate.

Before the summer program concluded, the children were guests of the seniors at a barbeque and the senior citizens were guests of the children at a wiener roast. Elizabeth Dynes, assistant administrator at the Dufferin-Oakes home, is optimistic the program will be continued next year.

She said of the program "at first I had my doubts but I would encourage it again."

According to Robert Butcher, administrator at Lee Manor in Owen Sound, the idea of a nursery school in a senior citizens' centre has some feasibility. Said Butcher, "It would need to be looked at very cautiously and would need to be well programmed."

Butcher admits it's something he has thought of as part of the activities division of the home. "I don't see it as a program seniors would take over entirely, they would only augment staff."

Sharon Parker, who came to Owen Sound from Cleveland, Ohio, and now operates the Happy Hearts nursery school, sees the idea of an integrated program as a good experience if the nursing home had the facilities and didn't try to involve too many senior citizens. That way it could become too confusing for both children and seniors, was her opinion.

Her idea even went beyond a nursery school in a senior citizens' centre. She can envisage a program operating successfully in a high school. Such a program could help students taking family living courses, was her view.

Ruth Hill, supervisor of the Owen Sound day nursery, supports the idea of a nursery school in a senior citizens' centre as long as it is properly set up with supervisors and qualified teachers with the proper training in early child care.

Mrs. Hill went on to explain that in her opinion too often society has everyone cut off in their own little compartments.

"There's no reason why there shouldn't be a day-care centre in a high school. Teens could take part or watch the children through glass. It could be set up as a regular centre with regular teachers and staff. Letting one half of the world see the other half of the world is better than reading a book."

Mrs. Hill was referring to high school students taking family life courses.

It Pays To Make Own Buns

By MARY MOORE

It is a joy to watch my 16-year-old grandson Davey work in the kitchen.

We needed hot dog rolls to serve seven people at a cook-out in the garden and since he was visiting me he got the job. He turned out 24 fat beauties topped with seeds — sesame and caraway and poppy. These would have cost at least $1.50 at the store.

Girls — it pays to make your hot dog rolls and hamburg buns.

HOT DOG ROLLS (24)

1 pkg. (1 tbsp.) granular yeast
2 tsp. sugar (first amount)
1 c. lukewarm water
1 c. scalded milk
¼ c. shortening
½ c. sugar (second amount)
2 tsp. salt
2 eggs
About 6 c. all-purpose flour (divided-see below)

In a large bowl soak the yeast and the 2 teaspoons sugar in the lukewarm water 10 minutes. To the scalded milk add the shortening, sugar and salt and stir to melt and dissolve and cool to lukewarm. Add to risen yeast liquid along with 4 cups of the flour and the 2 eggs and beat to mix well. Add another 1 cup flour, mix in as well as you can, cover and let rise 2 hours.

Stir down dough, turn out on floured (½ cup) board and knead 100 times using a little more flour as you knead when necessary. Shape into two 16" long rolls, cut EACH into twelve even pieces. Shape each into a smooth 5x2" roll.

Brush top with 1 beaten egg diluted with 1 tablespoon water. Dip each in saucer of seeds — Dave had three saucers covered with sesame, caraway and poppy seeds. Arrange seed side up, on greased cookie sheets FOUR INCHES apart. Let rise 2 hours. Bake at 425 deg. Fahr. about 10 minutes or until golden. Gorgeous with hot jumbo wieners and all of the fixings.

Frozen Food Needs Label

OTTAWA (CP) — Beginning Jan. 1, all previously-frozen meat, fish and poultry products sold in supermarkets will have to be labelled so, the consumer affairs department announced today.

The new regulations "are intended to alert consumers that these products were previously frozen or made in part from frozen products and are not fresh in the traditional sense," the department said.

Charles Sheppard, chief of the department's food division, said in an interview meat, fish and poultry products lose their flavor when they are frozen more than once. Repeated freezing also ruptured protein cell membranes, making the products more vulnerable to contamination.

Sheppard said it has been common practice for retail outlets to sell previously frozen meat products which consumers would assume to be fresh.

But consumers had a right to know if the product had been killed, say, six months earlier, and frozen until displayed as fresh meat in a retail store.

Consumers Missing Tax Cut Benefits

OTTAWA (CP) — There is no conclusive evidence whether clothing and shoe stores are giving customers the benefit from the elimination of commodity taxes last summer, according to Finance Minister John Turner.

He told the Commons that the consumer affairs department is monitoring shoe prices but "I haven't yet received the results."

He was replying to Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield who questioned the effect of the government's decision early last summer to abolish the 12-per-cent federal sales tax on footwear and clothing. The tax is applied at the manufacturer's level.

Consumer Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet said that a preliminary survey in Toronto indicated that consumers are benefiting. But a follow-up national survey was being held to get more detailed information.

If some retailers are raising prices unnecessarily to take advantage of the tax cut, he said, the government will not hesitate to name them.

Turner said the government wants the full benefit passed on to consumers. He indicated that the results of the national survey will be made public when it is completed.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Basic issues are featured. Don't veer too far off course. Those who depend on you may be demanding — and the reverse is true, too. Those you depend on, or employ, will be trying to serve and please. A hunch could help you strike pay dirt!

Alvarez-Welch Medical Report

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

There is much that many people could learn in the way of caring more acceptably for their aged parents or grandparents. So often what a middle-aged person thinks is good and kindly care is regarded by his old folks as a sort of persecution.

Often a daughter will keep saying to her father, "You mustn't do this," or "You mustn't do that," just as she would to a wayward child.

She forgets that her father, although perhaps a little showed up by age and a bit crippled by rheumatism or arthritis, still feels pretty much as he did in his youth. He still enjoys life; he still has an eye for a pretty girl; he still has a personality to maintain, and of all things, he hates most to be ordered about.

He hates to be told that he can't go out without his overshoes, his muffler or his overcoat. He hates to be told that he can't cut some kindling, shovel some snow, smoke his pipe, go for a stroll about town, or sit in the park with his cronies.

Grandmother, also, hates to be told that she can't do some of the washing, can't wash the dishes, do the mending, or go downtown shopping.

I fear that such campaigns of well-intentioned persecution often hurry old people into their second childhood. If the children would help them keep busy, social and self-respecting; if they would treat them as adults and not as naughty children the oldsters would probably remain alert and active much longer.

I know a man who at 85 is still running his large business and having a grand time. Why? Because he has no one to "say him nay". His wife is dead, and his daughter never tries to boss him.

One of the sad things about the last years of old people is that so often they have to live in the same house with a son or daughter and a number of grandchildren. An old man may greatly love his grandchildren, but he can't stand their noise and turmoil the way he did when he was young. The racket gets on his nerves. As a result, his daughter feels she must always be saying to the children, "Quiet, don't disturb Grandfather."

Obviously, this is bad for the grandchildren; it is hard on the daughter, and it is hard on the old gentleman. He would be much better off in a little apartment of his own.

This might cost his daughter or him a bit more, but everyone would be better off and much happier. This is particularly true if the old man's wife is still living and able to care for him.

A considerable amount of the nervous illness that I see every week in women is due to their inability to cope with the problems which arise when even sensible and thoughtful parents have to be cared for in the home. The sad feature is that old folks, just like the young ones, forget and sometimes try to run things.

One of the most important things that young people need to know is that often, as people age, the brain gets more and more injured by a number of tiny strokes, most of which pass unrecognized at the time. Many doubtedless come during the night.

An old person who has always had a spry body and an alert mind might suddenly have a bad dizzy spell, with perhaps a pain in his chest or abdomen, a cold sweat, nausea, or even some vomiting. He may become confused or have a tendency to fall.

He will get up and will seem all right, but soon the family will notice that he has changed in many ways. He is no longer the able man he was. His handwriting may change drastically.

He may become careless about his clothes and his cleanliness; he may have a little tremor of his hand, and his step may become shorter and less certain. He may lose some of the expression in his face, and his table manners may deteriorate.

In such cases, the big thing that the family must do is to realize that their father has had some little strokes, that some of his brain has been destroyed, and that this explains all the changes in character and ability.

Cab Fare Hike Sought In Winnipeg

WINNIPEG (CP) — Taxi operators have applied to a fare increase which, if granted, would make this city's fares the highest in Canada.

The Greater Winnipeg Taxi Cab Association is asking that meters start at $1.25 for the first one-sixth of a mile instead of the current 75 cents for the first two-fifths of a mile. Rates for additional distances would increase accordingly.

Highways Minister Peter Burtniak said Friday a public meeting will be held later this month to give taxi riders the opportunity to present their views.

PERSPECTIVES AND PREJUDICES

Even Altruistic Clerics Have A Propensity for Jargonese

By Rev. J. A. DAVIDSON

For many years now I have observed varieties and vagaries of attitude in church councils and committees and the such, and I am now pleased to be able to present a brief list of these.

Perhaps these are not without some significance in others of society's institutions, governmental, business, philanthropic, etc.

Blueprintism assumes that a serious problem can be dealt with by the devising of an elaborate plan — probably with appendices of non-vital statistics, fancy charts, and lists of recommended audio-visual aids.

Blueprinters, of course, must not get themselves in positions in which they may be held responsible for the implementation of their plans.

The rule here is that the plan is always good and the implementation by others always bad.

As Winston Churchill once said, "Any clever person can make plans for winning a war if he has no responsibility for carrying them out."

A bishop at the Second Vatican Council detected in some influential cardinals and curia officials an attitude which he labelled umbilicalism.

This attitude says, "This is my baby — and you'd better keep your grubby hands off it!" Umbilicalism is by no means a distinctively Roman Catholic phenomenon.

Agree-in-principle-ism is the way of the genial person who wishes to agree with a proposal without committing himself to doing anything practical about it.

More than one prominent church leader has acquired a reputation for statesmanship by years of verbosely embracing this approach.

Ecclesiastical Umbrella-ism is the posture of the church leader who would put the whole range of significant church activity under the umbrella of a label which points, not at all surprisingly, to the department or committee or special concern with which he is intimately associated.

The battle of the umbrellas is one of the less edifying spectacles in church life. Some of the umbrellas, of course, are simply pretty little parasols.

Fire-extinguisherism is the impulse to squirt special chemicals on every little flame as it appears anywhere in the church.

It contends that nothing must ever be done for the first time.

As a safety precaution it sometimes does a little gratuitous squirting when there is no flame but where there may be some danger of fire breaking out.

Some flames, of course, should be extinguished, but most of the ecclesiastical firemen do not distinguish between these and the "cloven tongues like as fire" we read about in the second chapter of the Acts of the Apostles and which are of the essence of the church.

Flamethrowerism, on the other hand, is the impulse to let loose, indiscriminately and incendiarily, at any or all of the church's programs and structures.

The source of this flame is generally indignation at the stage of easy ignition — and indignation, the psychologists teach us, is often merely personal frustration trying to work itself out in self-assertive activity.

Flamethrowerism tends to hold that nothing must ever be done for the second time — at least, not the way it was done the first time.

18% U.S. FAMILIES BUY NEW BIBLES

NEW YORK (AP) — Religious books are selling at a heavy clip in the United States, a new survey indicates. It found that 42 per cent of U.S. families bought Bibles or other religious books in the last year.

With U.S. census data putting the total number of families at about 52 million, that would mean that 21 million of them in the last 12 months bought at least one religious book.

The survey was made by National Family Opinion Inc., an independent research agency, and involved a sampling of 15,958 families representative of a national cross-section in income, area and other factors.

It found that 18 per cent of them have purchased new Bibles in the last year and 24 per cent, have purchased other religious books—a total of about nine million Bibles and 12 million other religious books.

The largest proportion of families, 6 per cent, own copies of the 350-year-old King James version, while the next most widely-owned version, the 30-year-old Revised Standard version, was in 32 per cent of the homes.

The third-placed version, now in 23 per cent of the family homes, was the three-year-old Living Bible. It is a paraphrase of the Bible, adding background material and clarifying obscure passages.

"The continued growth in Bible sales has been stiumulated by the new easy-to-read modern translations," a summary of the report said.

Filipino Explorer Calls Self Prince

MANILA (UPI) — A Filipino explorer who is pursuing a private claim to part of the disputed Spratly Island group in the South China Sea has been arrested for proclaiming himself "Prince of Freedomland," authorities announced Friday.

Tomas Cloma, who claimed discovery of the island chain in 1947, his brother and an unidentified Swiss associate have been under detention for the past month, according to Defence Secretary Juan Ponce Enrile.

"He organized a political state and installed himself as prince, including his brother. The organization of this state was done with the assistance of some people from Switzerland, one of whom is also under detention," Enrile said.

Cloma named the island group "Freedomland" although it is believed to include islands in the Spratlys, which are claimed by China, Taiwan, South Vietnam and North Vietnam and the Philippines.

The Philippines maintains a garrison on one of the islands which apparently is not part of the Spratlys.

FAST FOR A WRITER

By ELEANOR BOYLE

While Valentyn Moroz stood in a cell in Vladimir Prison this week as he had stood every week for more than four years, Ukrainian Canadians in Victoria showed their support for their jailed countryman in a hunger supper at St. Nicholas Ukrainian Catholic Church.

Five young members of the University of Victoria Ukrainian Club had fasted for 48 hours before the supper of black bread, kapusta and water Tuesday.

They and 30 others in attendance were demonstrating moral support for the intellectual now in jail near Moscow charged with "anti-Soviet propaganda and agitation."

Suppers organizer Andrew Makuch said the event was just one of a series being held across Canada by Ukrainians protesting suppression of their people by the Soviets.

But support for Moroz is not limited to nationalists of the USSR republic. In May, 1974, some Canadian newspapers carried an appeal for his release signed by 200 Canadian professors, writers, publishers and editors.

Moroz is reported to be in critical condition after four months' hunger strike, but more compelling that hunger pangs are the pangs he feels for his country whose culture and freedoms are being strangled.

The Ukraine culture is being destroyed by Russification said Makuch.

Freedom of speech and press, though allowed for in the constitution of the USSR, is no longer upheld, he said.

Maluch, the other 3,000 Ukrainians in Victoria, and those across Canada, refuse to admit Moroz is losing his battle against his country's loss of self-determination and freedoms.

That battle is Moroz's "crime" for which he is now jailed. His writings constantly criticize the official policies of Russification of the Ukraine and advocate independent status for the country.

"The Ukraine has a 1000-year culture, and I've got a deep love for it," said Makuch.

Christian Economics Lecture

Public understanding of profit is not a guideline for a Christian life, according to the executive director of the Committee for Justice and Liberty.

Gerald Vandezande of Toronto will speak on Christian Economics on Nov. 14 at 8 p.m. in Victoria's Christian Reformed Church.

World progress does not necessarily result from public pursuit of profit, he says, but from pursuit of righteousness.

Vandezande says Christ's call to economic stewardship means new ways of conducting business and living together in society are necessary.

All are welcome to this free lecture.

Workers to Rule

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Labor Relations Board ruled Thursday that British Columbia Railway workers must decide whether they wish to be represented by the new Canadian Union of Transport Employees or by a group organization from the existing five shopcraft unions.

SPECIAL MASS AT ST. ANDREW'S

A special performance of Guillaume Dufay's Missa Ave Regina Caelorum will be given in a Pontifical High Mass celebrated in Latin by Bishop Remi de Roo in St. Andrew's Cathedral on Nov. 16 at 8 p.m.

The performing edition of the mass has been prepared by Dr. Christine Mather, director of University of Victoria's Collegium Musicum which will perform the work. The cantor and conductor will be Dr. George Corwin.

The High Mass will be dedicated to the opening of Holy Year and commemorates the death of the composer in November, 1474.

Performance of Dufay's work has been planned in conjunction with the fall meeting Friday and Saturday of the Pacific Northwest Chapter of the American Musicological Society.

This meeting is being sponsored by UVic. Delegates will also attend a free public concert by UVic's Sonic Lab, Nov. 15 at 8 p.m. in the MacLaurin auditorium.

Student From Victoria On Spiritual Committee

Henry Contant of Victoria, right, a student at Dordt College in Iowa, has been selected to serve on the Spiritual Activities Committee of the school. The committee consists of students and faculty members who supervise chapel services, Bible study and prayer groups on campus.

SPEAKER ON "CHRISTIAN ECONOMICS"

Mr. Gerald Vandezande of Toronto, Executive Director of The Committee for Justice and Liberty, and a well-known TV and Radio speaker, will speak in Victoria on Thursday, Nov. 14, 8:00 p.m. in the Fellowship Room of the Christian Reformed Church

Agnes Street, off Glanford.

The speaker will show from Scripture that Christians may not endorse the conviction that "there is no surer road to progress than through the public understanding of profit".

Also that the Bible commands mankind, as well as its institutions and organizations, to follow after righteousness, for it exalts a nation. Christ's call to economic stewardship means new ways of conducting business, structuring employer-employee relations, etc. Admission free.

Make the Machines Work for YOU

WORK FOR WEEK

Late chrysanthemums are still blooming. When finished, cut old blooms, then reduce stems to two inches above soil level. Most modern varieties must be stored in coldframe for winter against excessive rain and frost, but still maintained in outdoors coolness.

Weed seedlings are germinating rapidly now after a shower or two. Where these occur around or near rock and alpine plants, they should be removed at once or they will smother your plants with moisture during winter.

Removal by the roots of perennial weeds such as burdock, thistles, and dandelions, is an advantage at this time while the soil is workable.

Fruit trees and other deciduous trees and shrubs can be planted as soon as available from nurseries. They are likely to be later than usual since leaf-fall has been delayed. But have the locations and holes prepared to put them in quickly.

Peas and broad beans can still be sown in small quantity.

Power machinery was designed to reduce the amount of energy needed to work the garden. The machines attain this goal only when maintained in top mechanical condition.

As with all man's labor saving devices, each tends to make life a little more complicated. There was far less maintenance involved when the push-mower, hand shears, and spade were the main tools used to provide exercise in leisure hours.

Power machines certainly reduce the time needed to do a given job. They also eliminate the physical exercise so necessary to good health.

Remedy

The time saved is spent in a doctor's office waiting to be told that golf, jogging, or a physical fitness program, is the remedy for our poor physique. We adopt these expensive cures and find we have less time for the garden. That starts a search for more time saving gadgets, with more complications, and more noise to irritate already frayed nerves.

It is still questionable whether any power machine can produce as good a job as a trained craftsman with hand tools, especially when the raw material is living plants and living soil.

Owning power machinery is now some sort of a status symbol so most of us have some power machines requiring regular servicing to keep them in a suitable condition to do a satisfactory, if not perfect, job.

Servicemen tell us that dirt is the main cause of failure in most machines. This is something the home gardener can control and thus save high repair bills, and the time to do it is before the machines are stored for the winter.

First a word of caution; always remove the cable from the spark plug of any gasoline engine before working on the machine. This applies especially to rotary mowers where turning the blade by hand can cause the motor to start and result in loss of fingers and damaged hands.

Straight maintenance servicing does not require a lot time or tools, but it saves frustration in the busy spring gardening months.

In the event shop service is needed it is wise to make arrangements now before the outboard motors arrive for winter servicing and storage. The gardener can expect a delay of three to four weeks now, and much longer in the spring.

The sharpening of mower blades, whether rotary blades or revolving cage, is best done by the repair shop that has the proper equipment. The important part of blade sharpening is balancing the finished job to eliminate high speed vibration which causes unnecessary engine wear.

The blade housing of a rotary mower usually accumulates a quantity of grass clippings and soil during the season. Although occasionally scraped, a thorough cleaning job is not done after every trip over the lawn.

Cleaned

The housing should now be carefully scraped, then cleaned with scrub brush and hose. If the metal shows signs of rusting and pitting, emery paper and a coat of marine enamel is in order. This is also necessary on eelctric mowers, first covering the electric motor with plastic to keep it dry.

Since local lawns can make plenty of growth between now and Christmas, the recommended winterizing of gasoline mower engines is almost impossible before the New Year.

One solution is to service the engine now, that is change the oil, take care of necessary repairs, and lubricate cables, pivot points and air cleaner, then fill the gas tank to the top to exclude air that causes rapid formation of gum when the machine is not in use. Each time the machine is used the gas tank is again filled before storage. It pays to run the engine for a few minutes twice a month if weather conditions prevent its use on the lawn.

The gas tank and carburetor can be drained at the end of December before the machine is stored for the next three months.

Garden tillers can be completely winterized as soon as the last patch of garden soil is turned over.

Enamel

Blades, tines, and the holding stake are placed in a tub of water to soak, then thoroughly scrubbed to remove all soil. The frame is washed down and soil removed from all corners and crevices. A coat of good marine enamel follows if needed.

Remove most of the gasoline from the tank, leaving only enough to run the engine for about ten minutes. Start the engine and let it run until it quits then drain the tank and remove any dirt or lint remaining at the bottom.

The formation of gum is the main cause of failure to start in spring. It forms in the fine mesh of gasoline filters and in any small opening or passage in the carburetor where a spot of gasoline can lodge.

Drain oil from the base while the engine is still warm, flushing with a mixture of oil and kerosene if much sludge is evident. Refill with fresh engine oil.

Valves

Remove the cylinder head and clean out the carbon. Check condition of valves and valve seats; have serviced if necessary. Replace the head using a new gasket to ensure a tight seal. Clean and reset the spark plug.

Pour enough engine oil through the spark plug hole to cover the top of the piston. Turn the engine by hand a few times to distribute this oil on the cylinder wall and around the rings, and to get some oil into the crankshaft bearings after draining. Replace the spark plug just finger tight.

Disconnect the throttle control wire, slide off the flexible armour and fill it with engine oil; drain and replace. Lubricate all throttle control fittings and adjustments, and any other pivot points.

If the tiller is fitted with rubber tires, have these inflated to the correct pressure before storing the machine for the winter.

Lawn mower motors are winterized in the same way after grass cutting is finished.

Any piece of machinery deteriorates more rapidly when idle than it does in constant use. For that reason it is desirable to completely service garden machines before they go into storage rather than when they are needed in the spring.

Electric hedge shears require blade sharpening and the electric motor should be checked, together with the cord and the attachment plug.

Blades

Dull blades put any unnecessary load on the motor causing excessive heating which results in breakdown of the insulation. Most gardeners buy the small shears than expect to do work that would tax a heavy duty professional machine, so that overloading, heating, and motor failure is quite common.

Cables for electric lawn mowers should also be carefully inspected. Breaks or cuts in the insulation need taping; if there are many cuts, the cable should be replaced in order to avoid an electric shock when mowing a damp lawn.

Attachment plugs at each end may need terminal screws tightening, or complete replacement. For safety, always use the correct three wire grounded cables plugged into a grounded outlet. It is dangerous to remove the grounded attachment plug and replace it with a two-prong plug just because a grounded outlet is not available.

9 IN MEMORIAM

BUTTON — In loving memory of our dear mother and grandmother, Eliza M. Button, who passed away November 8th, 1966:
"Eternal rest grant unto her, O Lord and may perpetual light shine upon her."
Always remembered by her loving daughter, Dorothy, her son-in-law, John, son Frederick, grandchildren and great grandchildren.

COX — In loving memory of a wonderful husband, father and grandfather, Robert Francis who passed away suddenly Nov. 9, 1972.
To hide my sorrow I always try,
I smile with others, alone I cry.
These words are written with sad regret
Of a husband I loved and will never forget
No longer here our lives to share.
But in our hearts you are always there.
—Forever loved and missed by his wife Leona, daughter Bobbie, son-in-law Jack and grandchildren.

GRAY — In remembrance of Margaret Gray who passed on suddenly at a Bella Bella Land November, 1971, at the age of 69 years.
A heart of gold stopped bearing,
Hard working hands at rest,
God broke our hearts to prove to us,
He only takes the best.

OLDNALL — In loving memory of a very dear wife, mother and nannie, Evelyn Oldnall.
—Much loved and sadly missed by her husband, Ted, and her family.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD, AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD. AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
—WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS.

Trudeau's Wife To Get Job

VANCOUVER (CP) — Margaret Trudeau will be taking a part-time job in journalism in the near future.

But the Prime Minister's 26-year-old wife, in an interview with the Vancouver Sun's Toyko correspondent, declined to give any details of her new job.

"I have been working on photography and writing and I have a job lined up, but I can't say anything about it just yet," she said.

She also declined to say what city the job would be in, but admitted the work would be for a magazine.

Mrs. Trudeau arrived here Friday after a 12-day tour of Japan.

In her Toyko interview, she said she doesn't know how Canadians will react to her decision to go to work.

"I don't know how they're going to react to this when they see me taking a job," Mrs. Trudeau said, adding that she found out Canadians were supporting her when she enfered hospital recently for treatment for emotional stress.

She also said she found it necessary to do the kind of work she is interested in because "it's important for me to be in control and do things my own way.

"I have something to say and I'm preparing it now for my job."

Mrs. Trudeau told reporters Thursday that she is exasperated with criticism of her free trip to Japan and won't explain the circumstances because there's nothing to explain.

Expenses of the trip for the Prime Minister's wife and a party of nine — about $30,000 according to one report in Tokyo — were paid by shipping magnate Y. K. Pao, who invited her to Toyko to launch his 273,000-ton World Canada oil tanker.

She confirmed earlier reports that Mr. Pao asked her to christen the vessel when she and her husband met him about 18 months ago through Edward Heath, the former British Prime Minister.

GUNS HOARDED?

VANCOUVER (CP) — The president of the British Columbia Social Credit Party says the provincial government is hoarding about 500,000 rounds of ammunition, guns and cars for a provincial police force.

Grace McCarthy, in a speech Friday to the Board of Trade, linked the stockpile to the new training scheme for sheriff's officers and clerical staffs in the justice and communication departments.

She would not specify where she thinks the ammunition is being stored, but said she is concerned the training scheme is due to continue until 1976 when the RCMP contract with B.C. comes up for review.

One Work-Incentive Plan That Works

OTTAWA (CP) — It has been called one of the most dynamic work incentive programs that has ever been tried and results seem to confirm the analysis.

Le Coin du Travailleur, financed by the federal manpower department and the city of Ottawa, is an experimental program to find jobs for residents in a section of Ottawa with a long history of chronic unemployment.

The project, on a three-year trial, supplied jobs for almost three-quarters of the 700 people who registered with it in the first 16 months.

That's no small feat in Ottawa's Lower Town, predominantly French-speaking and with less formal education and more unemployment than any other area in the city.

The regular manpower office has traditionally had little effect. Its sterile atmosphere, recessed lighting and crisp pamphlets just did not seem to reach Lower Town.

The average Lower Town resident has been unemployed for about two years, has probably never held a steady job and usually has a family history of unemployment.

Program co-ordinator Marc-Andre Paquette said: "A middle-class office worker and a person with little middle-class background are almos certain to clash, no matter how genuine the intentions.

"Many of these people haven't had the chance to develop goals toward jobs. In most families that's picked up from the father, but if the father has been unemployed where can the young people learn?"

While independent of the manpower department, except for financing, Le Coin du Travailleur receives its daily list of job opportunities.

"We're not competing with each other," said Gaston Guenette of Manpower. "The Lower Town office represents an attempt to discover new ways of improving the Canada Manpower service."

The nine-member Lower Town staff whose educational levels range from Grade 6 to an MA, have learned how to find jobs, Mr. Paquette said.

"We're people they can talk to freely. It's more than a counsellor-client relationship."

All nine employees in the office, located in the attic of a church hall, are long-time residents of Lower Town, who know the problems, the people and the frustrations. Perhaps of the greatest significance, they are not public servants.

The philosophy underlying the project is that unemployment is not an isolated problem, that it has roots in family, behavioral or personal problems.

To deal with apathy among the residents Le Coin du Travailleur has set up a unit of counsellors who go door-to-door making contet with the unemployed.

"They are also taxpayers and they have a right to service according to their needs," said Ginette Gagnon-Ouellette, head of the unit, "and their needs are different."

When contact is first made between counsellor and job-seeker, details are taken of the applicant's job desires and his history.

But Le Coin du Travailleur goes a step further. If the staff feels professional help is required before a person can successfully step into the work force the help of a professional agency is sought.

Some people out of work for a long time may require briefing on such basic matters as how to dress and act at a job interview.

Counselling does not end once the applicant has been placed. Because of the lack of traditional job experience, the counsellors do repeated follow-ups.

While the age of the applicants varies considerably, two of the most notable cases have been over 50 years of age.

One man who had been receiving a disability pension for six years came to Le Coin du Travailleur a year ago and has since held a steady clerical position.

A 62-year-old man, a skid road victim for 42 years; has been placed in a clerical job. Previously he had been spending time at an Ottawa hospital detoxification centre.

This was the first time he had held a job longer than was necessary to support his drinking problem. With the aid of Le Coin du Travailleur he has been on the wagon for six months.

Not all cases are so easily handled. Staff members tell of one 21-year-old woman, separated from her husband and baby, who was referred to the centre.

Her initiative had been crushed by previous experiences and her powers of concentration had dwindled. It took the centre some time to gain her confidence before referring the woman to a psychiatrist.

Then she was placed in a number of jobs — filing, restaurant work — none of which she could settle into.

Working with her and supplying needed confidence and emotional support, Le Coin du Travailleur finally placed her in a factory job. There for almost a year now, she is a supervisor, has her own apartment, supports herself and has her baby back.

ELIZABETHAN COIN FOUND

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The first Elizabethan-era coin ever found at a North American Indian village site was reported Friday by an archaeologist.

The English sixpence, bearing the image of Elizabeth I and believe minted in 1577, was found at the site of the onetime Miwok Indian village Apalacocha, or "houses of the southern woodpecker people."

Historians are attempting to establish where English explorer Sir Francis Drake landed in California in 1579, and whether the coin came from the Drake expedition.

The discovery last June was reported Friday during a hearing of the State Park commission by archaeologist Robert Slaymaker, who said he also found other European artifacts at the village site.

'Story That Hums' Still Sells

By JOHN FITZGERALD

MONTREAL (CP) — Burlesque, gas lamps and the nickel cigar may have made the trek back into yesteryear but there is still one golden oldie that's a long way from the graveyard.

The National Police Gazette, that naughty, bawdy tattler which curled grandaddy's moustache and pioneered tabloid newspapers with its sassy exposes, is alive and well and living in Montreal.

Owned by Montreal publisher Joseph Azaria, who bought the tabloid in 1968, the Police Gazette has long since done away with its famous pink newsprint and may no longer be the Libe of the barbershops but it can still give its readers "a story that hums."

Advertising itself as America's oldest tabloid, it first hit the streets of New York in 1845 with a glimpse for its readers of the "sparking in Tompkins Park" and the sinister-looking Orientals who introduced "the Mongolian curse" to the Big Apple's young ladies.

STORY THAT HUMS

"It was aimed at your average Joe who was interested in the goings-on among New York's low life and high life and reading a story that really hummed," said Nat Perlow, the man who has edited the tabloid for the last 20 years.

The headlines still read like something out of Ripley's Believe It or Not and the sirens are still telling all about fame, fortune and heartbreak a myth-maker's paradise of sport, sex and crime.

If there is one editorial policy the Police Gazette has always followed, it is bringing its readers the story behind the story, tales of intrigue and mystery out of America's scarlet past and "getting the goods" on personalities.

Whether it was reporting a bridge-jumping feat or introducing the first cheesecake art to America, the Police Gazette told it like it was, or at least as its editors thought people wanted to hear it.

SAVED FROM COLLAPSE

During the Depression, so the story goes, President Franklin D. Roosevelt saved it from collapse.

Its barbershop poll showed FDR would beat Alf Landon in the 1936 election and the White House talked the Democratic National Committee into purchasing two million copies for distribution.

Songwriter Irving Berlin immortalized the grand-daddy of scandal sheets in a line of one of his songs about "The pretty, young brunette in the pink Police Gazette."

"It was the original chronicler of America's past before television and before the newspapers got into reporting about the nitty-gritty," said editor Perlow.

And although its "plump and pleasing favorites of the footlights" seem tame today beside the love goddesses of Playboy and Penthouse, the Police Gazette still manages to pack a wallop in its screaming headlines.

A sampling reveals its credo of making the humdrum hum titles like An Unhappy Marriage Can Give You Cancer, "The Machine That Talks to the Dead, The Price I Paid for Stardom and an intimate talk with The World's Top Whore.

STILL READING

Although its circulation may have taken a drubbing from its saucier sisters, an estimated 209,000 readers pick up the Police Gazette each month to read about people like Fran Fullenwider, "the dimpled darling who weighs 340 pounds but doesn't let it keep her out of show business."

"If you don't have personalities, its important to create them, make people identify with them because people like to read about personalities they'd like to be like," said Mr. Perlow.

The old days are gone, he said.

"Years ago in Hollywood when there was the star system, you had dozens of great names to read about. Today, who cares?

"There are a lot of morning glories around but they don't become cult figures like, say, Garland or Dietrich or even Elvis Presley. It's all a one-shot-in-the-hole proposition."

TIMES CHANGING

Television, he said, has become America's myth-maker and the lurid but comic tales of the scarlet past that the Police Gazette wrote about seem like the Perils of Pauline.

Changing mores, however, have done little to alter the perennial staple of the Police Gazette diet as it chronicles the affairs and misadventures of the star who turned to demon rum and opium or the prizefighter who took one too many punches.

"Veronica Lake once told me that so many of the stars faded or were destroyed by the system because they were failures at success and people love to read about them because they can identify with many of their problems," said Mr. Perlow.

The Police Gazette's coverage of boxing helped to legalize the sport in the United States.

Its most famous award was the Police Gazette Diamond Belt, emblematic of the world heavyweight championship, and it is credited with pioneering newspaper sports pages and sports magazines.

BOOST CIRCULATION

Times are changing, however, and the magazine continues to face stiff competition from the mass circulation tabloid-size publications whose coverage is more sophisticated, racy and readable.

With its November issue, the magazine will grow to standard size in hopes of boosting its circulation in the supermarket and other mass consumer outlets.

Publisher Azaria, who refuses to bow to the trend toward subscription sales, said he believes this one small breach with the past will broaden the magazine's scope.

"We are making a four-in-one editorial package with strong emphasis on sports, people, current events and a half-dozen good old-fashioned Police Gazette exposes covering just about every subject," he said.

Meanwhile, the old Police Gazette lives on and the starlets, gangsters, palm-readers and other luminaries will continue to bare all.

DRIVER KILLED AS POWER FAILS

A woman died in a traffic accident at Sidney during an area-wide power failure at 10 a.m. today.

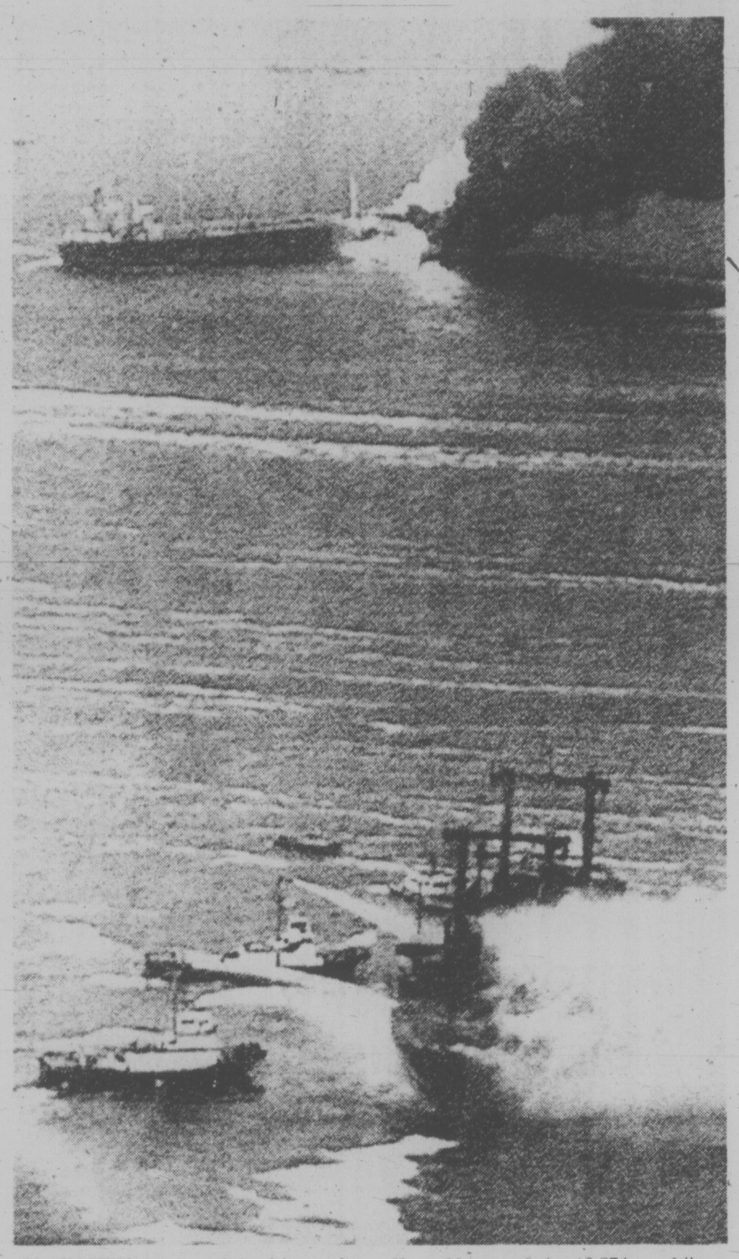
The Sidney area was still without power more than an hour after lights went off in the capital region and a B.C. Hydro employee said it was necessary to build up normal load slowly following total failure of the system.

Much local business came to a halt during the 20-minutes power was off in downtown Victoria and traffic slowed as signal lights failed.

The traffic lights at Beacon Avenue and Patricia Bay Highway were out when a car and empty auto transport carrier crashed in the intersection at 10:15, killing the car driver.

At Swartz Bay ferry terminal, mainland and Gulf Island-bound traffic halter because electric cash registers at wickets could not operate.

A Hydro spokesman said trouble appeared to be in switching equipment governing submarine transmission cable from the mainland, although the cable itself was intact. All of Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands were affected for period ranging from about 10 minutes to nearly two hours.



34 SEAMEN are feared dead in a collision and resulting fire today in Tokyo Bay which involved a 43,723-ton tanker (in background) the No. 10 Yuyo Maru and the 10,874-ton Liberian freighter Pacific Ares. The tanker was carrying liquid petroleum gas and immediately burst into flames.

ICBC Agents To Picket Tuesday

Victoria insurance agents will set up a picket line in front of the provincial motor-vehicle branch office on Menzies Street Tuesday morning in their continuing strike against Autoplan.

Meanwhile, Transport Minister Robert Strachan has promised no interruption of service by Insurance Corp. of B.C.

He noted insurance agents are independent businessmen and "if they want to abandon their business, that's up to them."

ICBC general manager Norman Bortnick said he is confident "a substantial number of companies" will remain involved with Autoplan under new terms of commission offered by the corporation. The commission rates would stand, he said.

Victoria strike co-ordinator Bob Parkinson said the boycott by the province's 1,100 insurance agents will continue until the government agrees to bargain on their demands.

He said the agents are seeking:

A 15 per cent increase in commission rates to 10.35 per cent, up from the present level of 9 per cent.

A longterm contract with the government to continue to act as Autoplan agents.

A commission fee for collecting the 5 per cent sales tax.

Parkinson said the government has offered only a decrease in the commission rate to 7 per cent plus a flat $2 fee, representing a reduction of 11 per cent.

He said the government also refuses to discuss a plea for a long-term contract and a fee for handling the 5 per cent sales tax.

Parkinson said the government's reason for suggesting a reduction in the commission rate for 1975 is that the forms will be easier to process next year.

"In fact, the reverse is true," he said.

Parkinson said because of computer foul-ups at ICBC headquarters that 250,000 motorists will not get their printouts for their insurance applications at year's end.

"This means for 250,000 cases, we insurance agents will have to locate their 1974 form and work out the new rate. This means more work for us, not less."

The Insurance Agents of British Columbia have offered to send all outstanding issues government has not agreed to to binding arbitration but the this, Parkinson said.

The strike by agents began at noon Friday with a picket line around the Vancouver headquarers of the Insurance Corporation of B.C. during the lunch hour.

No actions are planned over the long weekend but picketing will resume on Tuesday, Parkinson said.

Insurance agents' president Jack Hamilton claimed full support of all agents, involving about 80 per cent of Autoplan business. He said the motor-vehicle branch would not be able to handle 50,000 new, altered and renewal li-

Hotelmen Crying In Their Beer

The nickel hike in the cost of a glass of beer isn't enough and should be doubled, George Laak, head of the Victoria division of the B.C. Hotel Association, said today.

The association will meet Thursday to discuss the price announced Friday by William Bruce, general manager of the Liquor Administration Branch.

"We aren't happy," he said. "We were hoping for at least a 10-cent rise."

Operating costs have gone up between 30 and 40 per cent and the 30-cent glass of beer won't begin to cover them all, he claimed.

"Taxes have doubled in the past year, labor has increased an average of $1,000 an employee a year, tradesmen's wages have gone up and so have costs for freight and goods.

"We have a lot of caching up to do."

Laak said a 10-cent hike which would have brought a glass of beer to 35 cents would have put operators in a better position to meet their costs and keep up their places.

"The only thing that really scares me is if operators can't make a decent profit they will slacken off in keeping up their establishments. The housekeeping isn't going to be done that should be."

Pair Held For Bomb Threats

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) A quiet couple who grew Christmas trees was arrested Friday in a $1 million extortion bomb plot against the Bonneville Power Administration.

The suspects, David Heesch, 34, and his wife, Sheila, will be arraigned Monday on charges involving the recent bombings of 11 BPA transmission towers serving Portland.

Julius Mattson, special agent in charge of the FBI's office here, indicated no other arrests were expected in the case.

Agents apprehended the Heesch couple in southeast Portland while they were in a car with one of their two young children.

The warrants charge Heesch with writing the BPA and the FBI demanding $1 million in exchange for a promise to cease bombings.

He was accused of threatening a blackout of Portland. His wife, also 34, was charged with aiding in the extortion attempt.

Rescue Ends Farm Terror

ODESSA, Sask. (CP) A dramatic, but bloodless predawn rescue today ended almost 12 hours of terror for a farm family held hostage by a man who had escaped police custody in Edmonton.

Edward Millard, 26, was arrested by RCMP after his brother Roger, who had been flown from Edmonton to talk to him, seized the rifle which the man had used to stand off scores of policemen throughout the night.

The drama began about 7 p.m. Friday, when Millard, fleeing from police after an alleged kidnapping attempt in Weyburn, Sask., turned in at the small, two-storey farmhouse of farmer Felix Klein, near this community about 40 miles southeast of Regina.

Mrs. Klein and six children ranging in age from one to 19 years, were trapped in the house with the fugitive.

Millard had escaped custody in Edmonton Thursday, while facing charges of attempted murder and rape.

RCMP were on his trail after a woman complained of an attempted kidnapping in Weyburn, about 40 miles from the Klein farm.

A witness noted the licence number of the car involved in the incident.

RCMP said during the 12 hours Millard held the farmhouse, the Klein family stayed in the attic, refusing his demands that they come down.

The police borrowed large trucks from neighboring farms to serve as shields in case they decided to storm the house.

But their main hope was Millard's family, his mother, father and two brothers, who were flown in to talk to him.

While RCMP with bullet-proof vests and rifles moved into position, Millard's family began what was to be 1½ hours of tense negotiation with him, using loudspeakers.

Finally, he agreed to let his brother Roger into the house. After he refused to give up his rifle, Roger seized it and grappled with him until RCMP rushed in and helped overpower him.

Millard was taken to hospital for examination.

SUPERMARKET CREDIT PROBE

The latest merchandising gimmick, credit cards for supermarkets, has created the newest controversy in Canada and federal Consumer Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet has ordered a proble of the practice.

A similar probe is under way by the Ontario government. Both governments are concerned that credit cards will result in higher food prices because of the added cost of servicing.

Master Charge and Chargex are conducting experiments in various Canadian centres, including Victoria. A survey of B.C. experiments is on page 11.

Courier Gets Jail Not Fine

VANCOUVER (CP) The British Columbia Court of Appeal Friday cancelled a $15,000 fine a drug courier was assessed in provincial court and replaced it with a five-year prison sentence.

Kenneth Tighe was fined but did not receive a jail term when he pleaded guilty in provincial court to possession of about $65,000 in cocaine for the purpose of trafficking.

At that time, provincial court Judge Nicholas Mussallem said he was taking into the fact that Tighe was 24 years old, came from a good family, had a Bachelor of Arts degree, had a good work record and that in this case he was serving as a courier.

He gave Tighe three years to pay the fine, $3,000 of which Tighe had already paid when the Crown appealed on grounds that the sentence was inadequate.

The court was told that in a bag in Tighe's possession police found 21.3 ounces of cocaine and in his room a further four pounds of the drug.

Mr. Justice A. E. Branca, in handing down the appeal court judgment, said: "This imposing of a fine in this case was totally and completely inadequate punishment.

"While it may create hardships upon this respondent, as it should it fails as a sufficient deterrent and does not adequately protect the public," he added.

"This respondent, not withstanding his good record in the past, is entitled to very little consideration. He has no mercy on those who are addicted and those who become slaves to the use of the drugs in which he trafficks."

Mr. Justice Branca said Tighe, acting as a courier, was carrying out an important job, "for those higher up who hide behind and employ stupid, unthinking and irresponsible people such as Tighe as part of a scheme for the distribution of these narcotics to the public.

"In the control of this traffic and in the protection of the public, even the stupid, the unthinking and the irresponsible will have to be sternly dealt with," he said.

'Starve Out Solutions'

ROME (UPI) More than 1,000 delegates to the world food conference listened in disbelief as Philippines' foreign minister Carlos Romulo suggested they be locked up until they figure out how to stop famine.

"Let us agree to be confined in this hall until we can alleviate famine in the world," Romulo said Friday.

"Let us be given to eat every day of our confinement only what Asian and African peasants eat. Otherwise, let us just eat our own words. I am sure this will speed up the proceedings of this conference," he added.

Montreal Remains Paralyzed

MONTREAL (CP) — One of Canada's main rail terminals remained paralysed today as thousands of striking railway workers stayed off the job to show their dissatisfaction with a new collective agreement.

About 15,000 Canadian National Railways and Canadian Pacific Railway employees walked out, halting all railway passenger and freight services out of Montreal and forcing thousands of commuter to find other modes of transportation.

"All our operations will remain closed until further notice," a CNR spokesman said.

The CNR was hit by a walkout by 5,000 of its employees earlier in the week. About 2,200 CPR shop craft workers picketed downtown Windsor Station Friday, forcing cancellation of all outbound trains.

The railway halted operations later in the day and a spokesman said 9,000 employees were sent home.

The strikers are protesting a $350 cost-of-living bonus awarded all 100,000 rail workers across Canada.

The strikers say the bonus compares poorly with a $750 settlement recently awarded to Montreal firemen.

IDEA OF UNTTRAINED MAN

Anti-Gravity Device Discovered in U.K.

LONDON (CP) The fertile brain of British scientist Eric Laithwaite has produced a new device that he thinks could allow space ships to vastly increase the range of their travels.

It is an anti-gravity device that produces a lift and weight-reduction by means of swiftly-revolving gyroscopes attached to two hinged metal arms.

Laithwaite is famous in Britain for his work in the field of linear induction motors as applied to such transportation means as hovercraft.

But his most spectacular recent work, in conjunction with Prof. Fred Eastham of Aberdeen University, has been on the new propulsion system known as electromagnetic rivers.

There has been political discussion recently in Ontario about whether the Krauss-Maffei magnetic levitation system for mass rapid transit, now being developed, should be scrapped in favor of the Laithwaite-Eastham method, which would move trains at high speed along electomagnetic force fields induced over an alumihum-topped concrete track.

Laithwaite, who teaches electromagnetic engineering at the Imperial College of Science and Technology in London, got the anti-gravity idea from the contents of a dream related to him by a public relations man with no scientific training.

The man told Prof. Laithwaite he had dreamed several times of a meeting of a learned society at which a scientist placed a small box on a kitchen measuring scale.

The scale registered 15 pounds but when the scientist pressed a switch, it read ten pounds, despite an absence of either applied air thrust or mechanical thrust.

The scientist then opened the box to show two electrically-driven gyroscopes, one on each end of a rotating arm.

The public relations man took out a patent on his dream and went to see Laithwaite.

The professor altered the design he was shown, bringing in some ideas that had been put to him by an amateur inventor, and produced the machine he has now built which seems to do exactly what he says it does.

Laithwaite is a strong believer in intuition and dreams and said some months ago that many of his best ideas come to him when he is dozing early in the morning or late at night.

This is his explanation of how it works:

"When two hinged metal arms, each bearing a fast-revolving gyroscope, are rotated at high speed, they automatically rise in the air without any thrust being placed on them. A curved rail then drives them down again and the reaction to this gives lift to the whole machine as the cycle is rapidly repeated."

Its challenge to parts of Newton's laws of motion and its practical possibilities excite him greatly.

He says that reducing weight in spaceships by a system of gyroscopes would obviate the need for the jets used to manoeuvre and drive them when they have achieved orbit.

"Since jets are useless when they run out of fuel, space travel has so far been limited to the planets. With gyros operated by solar power or nuclear energy it will be possible to explore other solar systems."

He also sees possible such applications as silent propulsion for ships and adds: "But it is the consequences for the whole of mechanical and atomic theory that may be really shattering."

4 Walked Off Job, CanCel Closes Down

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) A British Columbia Labor Relations Board official will meet union and management representatives during the weekend to try to settle a dispute which has halted production at the Canadian Cellulose operation.

The pulp mill, which employs about 1,200 people, is without power or steam following the walkout Friday of four men on the powerhouse crew.

The men are protesting the firing of an employee for negligence after a major fire last Saturday.

A spokesman for Local 4 of the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada said about 40 men were off the job by Friday evening, with most of the other employees doing maintenance work.

CanCel is 70-per-cent owned by the B.C. government.

Eric Grimshaw made it back but not all the way

They Would Like To Serve Again

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

On Monday at 11 a.m. we will stand quietly and remember our war dead.

But what of the living dead — the comrades who made it back — but not into the full stream of civilian life?

This is the question Eric Grimshaw, 58, of 617 Admirals, asks for himself and thousands like him.

After more than 30 years of soldiering, in the British and Canadian armies, he feels more displaced than those who wandered the world, political aliens of their own countries, during the Second World War.

There's a tinge of envy when he sees how today's armed forces are treated — good salaries, substantial pensions, many of them able to work at second jobs during their years of service, preparing themselves for the day when the umbilical cord between them and service life is cut, throwing them into the civilian stream.

Grimshaw is representative of the in-betweeners — those who signed up when service pay was minimal but motivation great. In love with the intangibles — the sense of belonging, the lure of travel — neither they nor their superiors made plans for the years ahead.

As Grimshaw explains, men like him hit the civilian labor market with "no trade unless you like to consider a machine gunner, commando, rifleman and similar trades" a negotiable product.

Grimshaw signed up with the British army when he was 15, spending 10 years and two months overseas before he was able to go home.

His time was up in 1945. He wanted to sign on again.

"They wouldn't have me," he says, "I'd have dearly loved to have signed on again."

He said the main reason for the rejection was that he had been wounded in the shoulder with a German bullet.

Still in love with the army and unskilled in any other trade, he went to Calgary, joining up with the 2nd Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry.

In 1966 his days with the Canadian army were over, too.

The combined result of his soldiering was a pension of—$236, defective hearing, suspected diabetes and the old shoulder wound plus an extra bonus — the bullet which did it, given him by the German doctor who removed it after he was taken prisoner.

Since that time he's been in a limbo — too old for army life and unprepared for challenging civilian work.

He's an enigma to the younger generation and an embarassment to his peers, who had so many years in 'civvy street' in which to make a life.

He'll be there at the Cenotaph on Monday, wearing his poppy and the row of medals that sum up the meaningful part of his life.

Lost in this world, he wonders, would he do it again.

He would.

"It was the only thing I knew," he says. "I've been a soldier . . . it's the only thing I knew."

Drinkers to Get the Word

Compulsory Counselling Soon for Drivers

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

The never-ending stream of impaired drivers weaving from car to police station and through the courts will soon find something new in store for them besides the traditional fine, loss of licence and embarrassing criminal record — compulsory attendance at a special course.

Starting the end of this month, the course will involve meeting on four successive Thursday nights from 7:30 p.m. to 10 p.m. at the Saanich provincial court room.

Victoria traffic court Judge Fred Green has had no trouble finding candidates.

In Monday's court session this week 17 persons appeared charged with drinking driving offences.

That was a particularly heavy list. The average works out to about five a day, Green estimates.

His problem is trying to sort out who should go on the course and who should not.

Organizers of the program, the Alcoholism Foundation of B.C. hope to limit each session to 20 "students".

"We feel that is the maximum number to stimulate free and easy discussion in the group," says Cathie Perkins, supervisor of the foundation's Victoria branch.

The attorney-general's department, strongly supporting the program and agreeing to fund it through the Alcohol and Drug Commission, would like to see all persons convicted of impaired driving ordered to take the course.

And that goal may be realized too if the program proves successful.

"Right now all we can do is touch the tip of the iceberg," Green acknowledges.

GREEN
. . . who should go?

The course, modelled after a program in Phoenix, Arizona, has in the past year already been instituted in Nanaimo, Prince George and Calgary.

The results so far have been encouraging.

The instructor of the Prince George course reported "a significant change in the attitude of participants."

A committee was formed in Victoria on April 23 to implement the program here.

The biggest stumbling block, and cause for delay, was in finding a co-ordinator. The problem was surmounted last week when the committee recommended hiring Frank Taylor.

Taylor, a retired army instructor and freelance instructor of the defensive driving course at Camosun College, took over the next day, Oct. 31.

Miss Perkins says his ability to combine "firm discipline" with "a sincere interest in helping people rehabilitate their ways" will spell the difference between success or failure.

Taylor says he expects some initial resistance from his "students", who are all forced to attend as a condition of probation set by the judge.

Using films, visual aids, group discussion and arranging lectures conducted by various resource people, Taylor hopes to first shock, then cajole his students into analyzing the reasons why they drove while drunk.

The approach won't be a didactic one, Miss Perkins says.

"The whole aim is to help these people change their attitude to driving when they have been drinking.

"It is not our business to stop them drinking . . . but we feel it is everyone's business to stop them from drinking and driving."

Local Supermarkets Eyeing Eat-Now, Pay-Later Plan

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The next big target for credit card companies is the neighborhood supermarket — and so far the response has been mixed.

In Victoria, the Warehouse food chain of four supermarkets this week began offering a "Chargex for food" service.

However, in Vancouver, Friday, Canada Safeway announced it will end its Master Charge experiment on Tuesday because customers do not seem to be interested.

Ron Muller, manager of the Langford Warehouse Food Store, said his company jumped into the charge card service because he is convinced it is the coming thing.

"We are a little ahead of our time but we wanted to be first," he said.

He said he is convinced Chargex willl increase the volume of sales and therefore no price increases will be necessary to pay for the added service.

"If we have to raise prices because of this then we would quit and go back to cash sales," Muller said.

He said handling customers through a credit card is faster than processing a cheque but a little slower than a cash sale.

Some consumer groups have opposed the credit card system in supermarkets on the grounds it could slow the service and would add to food costs. The cost to food stores for the credit card service is about 3 per cent.

No Collection Problems

However, the store has the benefit of instant cash and no collection problem. As soon as a sale is registered with the credit card company, the amount of the sale is credited to the bank account of the store. The credit card company guarantees the money unless the credit card used is void because it has expired or been stolen.

Muller said application forms for the charge card are available at Warehouse stores but the card is issued through the banks.

Meanwhile, in Vancouver a spokesman for Canada Safeway said the company has decided against using the credit card system.

The company began using Master Charge cards at six stores in the Vancouver area in July as an experiment.

"However, no one seemed to be interested. I guess paying cash for food is jut a habit that people didn't want to change."

Safeway said it could not get a reading on how efficient the charge card system was because it got very little use during the four-month experiment.

Super Valu offers a charge system for food in its Park Royal store but this is done through Eaton's. Otherwise, the only major food stores offering charging facilities in Vancouver are department stores.

In Victoria Eaton's, Woodward's and The Warehouse offer charge facilities for food.

New Appointments To Police Boards

Appointments to the new Oak Bay and Saanich police boards were approved by cabinet Friday.

The five-member boards replace the old three-man police commissions and were created by the Police Act last spring to provide greater community representation on the councils which direct B.C.'s 12 municipal police forces.

The Oak Bay board will include Mayor Brian Smith, who is automatically chairman, three members appointed by cabinet from municipal council nominees and one member chosen by council.

Ken Murphy, a member of the old Oak Bay Police Commission, is the municipal appointee and cabinet has chosen retired Air Force officer and now university student Richard Kilshaw, investment dealer Michael Manning and Teresa Reksten, a housewife who also served on the old commission.

Saanich Mayor Ed Lum will serve with municipal appointee John Tribe, the former municipal clerk, and cabinet appointees Geoff Vantreight, wholesale florist and Saanich farmer, Miles Primrose, a gas station operator, and Rory Regan, curriculum consultant with Greater Victoria school board.

A spokesman in the attorney-general's department said 10 of the 12 boards have been established so far and the last two will be set up next week.

With appointment of the final boards, the old Police Act and its commissions will be repealed.

WOMAN KILLED

An elderly Victoria woman died Friday night two hours after being struck down by a car at Cook and McClure.

Victoria police said Annie Smith, 71, of 777 Cook, was walking with a friend across Cook at 7:35 p.m. when she was hit by a car driven by Allen Fokkema, 18, of 3571 Calumet.

She was taken to Victoria General Hospital with multiple injuries.

The friend saw the car coming and jumped clear, police said.

A spokesman said it was raining heavily at the time and visibility was poor.

Behind the Hip, a Belted Case-Knife

THERE WAS A TIME when a young man walking a town street with a sheath-knife on his belt would have attracted considerable attention. But repetition has a way of reducing the startling to the commonplace, and I no longer stare when I spot a cased blade riding jauntily alongside a denim-clad hip.

This sign of our times interests me, though, and I've wondered what message the snickersee worn in public proclaims.

'I have a sting, and am prepared to use it.' Is that the warning?

Sometimes, no doubt.

An alarmist might even point to knife-wearing in Canada, find a parallel in American handgun-toting, and draw some dark conclusions about the new barbarism. These would be justified at least in part. The bearing of arms by the private citizen becomes more prevalent in violent times.

As a non-alarmist, however, I'm inclined to take such theorizing with a grain of salt. In spite of a move by Vancouver to outlaw the belt-knife within its limits, the federal authority takes what impresses me as a more reasonable view.

Unless circumstances suggest otherwise, and with one notable exception, it regards the knife as a tool and lays down the law accordingly.

(The exception is the zip, slip or switch blade — a nasty piece of business designed for anti-social purposes and strictly banned in Canada.)

The man in woods or work gear with a knife in plain sight on his belt is assumed to have peace in his soul.

In the unlikely event that I were to head for town in a business suit with a knife worn as an appurtenance, the chances are that the first policeman I met would ask some searching questions.

The concealed weapon and I trust the little jack-knife in my pocket doesn't land in this illegal category — is something else again. The law is uncompromisingly stiff in the matter of concealed weapons.

Legalities apart, I'm inclined to look on sheath-knife carrying less as a threat to law and order than as a by-product of the back-to-nature kick. The knife cased on the haunch is part of a mystique: it's a link with the buckskin past, when Dan'l Boone shot a bar in that tree, and dressed it with his trusty steel.

If violence is on the increase, so is the atavism that has set so many young ones yearning for a basic life in uncluttered country. The belt-knife is part of that romantic picture.

This cult of the knife has produced some superb examples of the cutler's art. I've inspected custom-tailored blades brought north by American sportsmen that cost their proud owners as much as a fine fly rod. Most of these Excaliburs in miniature struck me as less functional than the handy Russell Canadian belt-knife that sometimes goes afield with me. But anyone with an eye for skilled hand-crafting would find them objects of beauty.

Knives as tools are no strangers in my life. I've used them since I was old enough to hack a finger with my first Boy Scout special, and wouldn't feel fully clothed outdoors without a useful blade.

But not necessarily a sheath knife, which is a tool of limited usefulness, and one which the seasoned woods-trotters of my Vancouver Island boyhood held in low regard. They gutted their fish and field-dressed their game with such sturdy Sheffield-forged pocket knives as my father carried. I have that one still, its bone side-plates darkened by sweat and smooth from wear, and its two blades reduced by the whetstone to mere slips of steel.

The sheath knife to them was a piece of fooferaw — the sort of showy nonsense a greenhorn lumbered himself up with. For heavier work than a man's jack-knife would handle, there was always the home butcher knife (four bits at the hardware store) and beyond that, the axe.

Theirs was too sweeping a judgment.

A belt knife is my choice in a boat or on a winter stream, where wet and frequently cold-numbed fingers make hard work of opening a jack-knife.

For the rest, the knife I use most is the twin-bladed, pearl-handled pocket companion that I found years ago in the dust of a country road.

It wouldn't make much of a dint in a bear. But it will unseam a trout or curl a fine shaving off a cedar stick, and more I don't ask of it.

In Recital

Third in the present series of Wednesday evening concerts at St. John's Anglican Church takes place next week when the featured artist will be baritone Charles Dorrington.

His recital program will consist of arias from the oratorios and operas of Handel and oratorios of Mendelssohn. Included will be excerpts from the well-loved Messiah and Elijah.

Heroes! Villains! Girls!

Another old-style "meller-drammer" complete with pure and lovely heroine, upright hero, villains, a drunk and some fallen ladies, will celebrate St. Luke's Players 100th production in 25 years of existence.

The play is an original by member Betty Jeanpierre. Its title: A Fate Worse Than Death!

The play, liberally interspersed with songs, jokes and topical political allusions, opens Wednesday at St. Luke's Hall, Cedar Hill Cross Road. It will continue through Nov. 16 with curtain at 8:15 p.m.

Set in Victoria and the Island in the lusty nineties, locales are specifically James Bay, Johnson Street, Comox and Cumberland. Action is concerned with, believe it or not, the efforts of Nellie and her mother to pay off their mortgage, the villains' efforts to seize their home and the courage and perspicacity of Nellie's true love, Cpl. Alan Righteous of the NWMP in coming to her aid.

Director of the production is Dennis Kershaw, who has had long experience in local amateur theatre circles.

Dorothy Wolff appears in the role of Nellie and Terry Martin as the dauntless corporal. Others in the cast are Clo Dowling, Ron Way, Dave Shearer, Ed Rowley, Marilyn McKenzie and Lois Fraser, plus an assortment of extras appearing as pirates, Chinese and citizens of old Victoria.

Supporting the show at the piano is Joan Bulmer.

Tickets available at the door each evening, are $1.50 with students and pensioners $1.

Trudeau's Wife To Get Job

VANCOUVER (CP) — Margaret Trudeau will be taking a part-time job in journalism in the near future.

But the Prime Minister's 26-year-old wife, in an interview with the Vancouver Sun's Toyko correspondent, declined to give any details of her new job.

"I have been working on photography and writing and I have a job lined up, but I can't say anything about it just yet," she said.

She also declined to say what city the job would be in, but admitted the work would be for a magazine.

Mrs. Trudeau arrived here Friday after a 12-day tour of Japan.

In her Toyko interview, she said she doesn't know how Canadians will react to her decision to go to work.

"I don't know how they're going to react to this when they see me taking a job," Mrs. Trudeau said, adding that she found out Canadians were supporting her when she entered hospital recently for treatment for emotional stress.

She also said she found it necessary to do the kind of work she is interested in because "it's important for me to be in control and do things my own way.

"I have something to say and I'm preparing it now for my job."

Mrs. Trudeau told reporters Thursday that she is exasperated with criticism of her free trip to Japan and won't explain the circumstances because there's nothing to explain.

Expenses of the trip for the Prime Minister's wife and a party of nine — about $30,000 according to one report in Tokyo — were paid by shipping magnate Y. K. Pao, who invited her to Toyko to launch his 273,000-ton World Canada oil tanker.

She confirmed earlier reports that Mr. Pao asked her to christen the vessel when she and her husband met him about 18 months ago through Edward Heath, the former British Prime Minister.

GUNS HOARDED

VANCOUVER (CP) — The president of the British Columbia Social Credit Party says the provincial government is hoarding about 500,000 rounds of ammunition, guns and cars for a provincial police force.

Grace McCarthy, in a speech Friday to the Board of Trade, linked the stockpile to the new training scheme for sheriff's officers and clerical staffs in the justice and communication departments.

She would not specify where she thinks the ammunition is being stored, but said she is concerned the training scheme is due to continue until 1976 when the RCMP contract with B.C. comes up for review.

ELIZABETHAN COIN FOUND

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The first Elizabethan-era coin ever found at a North American Indian village site was reported Friday by an archaeologist.

The English sixpence, bearing the image of Elizabeth I and believe minted in 1577, was found at the site of the onefime Miwok Indian village Apalacocha, or "houses of the southern woodpecker people."

Historians are attempting to establish where English explorer Sir Francis Drake landed in California in 1579, and whether the coin came from the Drake expedition.

The discovery last June was reported Friday during a hearing of the State Park commission by archaeologist Robert Slaymaker, who said he also found other European artifacts at the village site.

THAT NAUGHTY POLICE GAZETTE . . .

'Story That Hums' Still Sells

By JOHN FITZGERALD

MONTREAL (CP) — Burlesque, gas lamps and the nickel cigar may have made the trek back into yesteryear but there is still one golden oldie that's a long way from the graveyard.

The National Police Gazette, that naughty, bawdy tattler which curled grandaddy's moustache and pioneered tabloid newspapers with its sassy exposes, is alive and well and living in Montreal.

Owned by Montreal publisher Joseph Azaria, who bought the tabloid in 1968, the Police Gazette has long since done away with its famous pink newsprint and may no longer be the Libe of the barbershops but it can still give its readers "a story that hums."

Advertising itself as America's oldest tabloid, it first hit the streets of New York in 1845 with a glimpse for its readers of the "sparking in Tompkins Park" and the sinister-looking Orientals who introduced "the Mongolian curse" to the Big Apple's young ladies.

STORY THAT HUMS

"It was aimed at your average Joe who was interested in the goings-on among New York's low life and high life and reading a story that really hummed," said Nat Perlow, the man who has edited the tabloid for the last 20 years.

The headlines still read like something out of Ripley's Believe It or Not and the sirens are still telling all about fame, fortune and heartbreak—a myth-maker's paradise of sport, sex and crime.

If there is one editorial policy the Police Gazette has always followed, it is bringing its readers the story behind the story, tales of intrigue and mystery out of America's scarlet past and "getting the goods" on personalities.

Whether it was reporting a bridge-jumping feat or introducing the first cheesecake art to America, the Police Gazette told it like it was, or at least as its editors thought people wanted to hear it.

SAVED FROM COLLAPSE

During the Depression, so the story goes, President Franklin D. Roosevelt saved it from collapse.

Its barbershop poll showed FDR would beat Alf Landon in the 1936 election and the White House talked the Democratic National Committee into purchasing two million copies for distribution.

Songwriter Irving Berlin immortalized the grand-daddy of scandal sheets in a line of one of his songs about "The pretty, young brunette in the pink Police Gazette."

"It was the original chronicler of America's past before television and before the newspapers got into reporting about the nitty-gritty," said editor Perlow.

And although its "plump and pleasing favorites of the footlights" seem tame today beside the love goddesses of Playboy and Penthouse, the Police Gazette still manages to pack a wallop in its screaming headlines.

A sampling reveals its credo of making the humdrum hum—titles like An Unhappy Marriage Can Give You Cancer, The Machine That Talks to the Dead, The Price I Paid for Stardom and an intimate talk with The World's Top Whore.

STILL READING

Although its circulation may have taken a drubbing from its saucier sisters, an estimated 200,000 readers pick up the Police Gazette each month to read about people like Fran Fullenwider, "the dimpled darling who weighs 340 pounds but doesn't let it keep her out of show business."

"If you don't have personalities, its important to create them, make people identify with them because people like to read about personalities they'd like to be like," said Mr. Perlow.

The old days are gone, he said.

"Years ago in Hollywood when there was the star system, you had dozens of great names to read about. Today, who cares?

"There are a lot of morning glories around but they don't become cult figures like, say, Garland or Dietrich or even Elvis Presley. It's all a one-shot-in-the-hole proposition."

TIMES CHANGING

Television, he said, has become America's myth-maker and the lurid but comic tales of the scarlet past that the Police Gazette wrote about seem like the Perils of Pauline.

Changing mores, however, have done little to alter the perennial staple of the Police Gazette diet as it chronicles the affairs and misadventures of the star who turned to demon rum and opium or the prizefighter who took one too many punches.

"Veronica Lake once told me that so many of the stars faded or were destroyed by the system because they were failures at success and people love to read about them because they can identify with many of their problems," said Mr. Perlow.

The Police Gazette's coverage of boxing helped to legalize the sport in the United States.

Its most famous award was the Police Gazette Diamond Belt, emblematic of the world heavyweight championship, and it is credited with pioneering newspaper sports pages and sports magazines.

BOOST CIRCULATION

Times are changing, however, and the magazine continues to face stiff competition from the mass circulation tabloid-size publications whose coverage is more sophisticated, racy and readable.

With its November issue, the magazine will grow to standard size in hopes of boosting its circulation in the supermarket and other mass consumer outlets.

Publisher Azaria, who refuses to bow to the trend toward subscription sales, said he believes this one small breach with the past will broaden the magazine's scope.

"We are making a four-in-one editorial package with strong emphasis on sports, people, current events and a half-dozen good old-fashioned Police Gazette exposes covering just about every subject," he said.

Meanwhile, the old Police Gazette lives on and the starlets, gangsters, palm-readers and other luminaries will continue to bare all.
